SEVENTH REPORT OF ROSEN GOLDBERG INC.

I INTRODUCTION

1. By Order of the Honourable Justice Cavanagh dated April 6, 2021 (“the Appointment Order”), Rosen Goldberg Inc. was appointed receiver (the “Receiver”) of the assets, undertakings and properties of The Midas Investment Corporation (the “Debtor” or “Midas”), including the properties municipally known as 205 Yonge Street, in Toronto (the “Yonge Street Property”) and 90 Eastern Avenue, in Toronto (the “Eastern Avenue Property” and, collectively, with the Yonge Street Property, the “Properties”), pursuant to section 243(1) of the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act and section 101 of the Courts of Justice Act. A copy of the Appointment Order is attached as Appendix A.

II TERMS OF REFERENCE

2. In preparing this Seventh Report, the Receiver has relied upon information from third party sources (collectively, the “Information”). Certain information contained in this Sixth Report may refer to, or be based on, the Information. As the Information has been provided by other parties, or obtained from documents filed with the Court in this proceeding, the Receiver has relied on this Information, and to the extent possible reviewed the Information for reasonableness. However, the Receiver has not audited or otherwise attempted to verify the accuracy and completeness of the Information in a manner that would wholly or partially comply with Canadian Auditing Standards pursuant to the Chartered Professional Accountants of Canada Handbook and, accordingly, the Receiver expresses no opinion or other form of assurance in respect of the Information.

III PURPOSE OF REPORT

3. The Seventh Report is filed by the Receiver to:
- a) Report on the results of the claims process undertaken by the Receiver;
  - b) Seek the Court’s authorization to make a distribution to certain creditors of Midas as a result of the claims process;
  - c) Approve the activities of the Receiver as described in its Seventh Report,

IV BACKGROUND

4. The Applicants were holders of the first mortgage over the Properties (the “First Mortgage”). The First Mortgage was registered on March 4, 2013 and secures payment of the principal amount of $5 million, together with interest at the rate of 10% per annum, calculated monthly, not in advance, for a term of two years and matured on March 1, 2015. The First Mortgage was in financial default since October 1, 2013.

5. The appointment of the Receiver was made after a lengthy trial relating to the validity and enforceability of the Applicant's mortgage security. The action was tried by the Honourable Justice Koehnen in 2020. In reasons released on December 31, 2020, the action was dismissed and the First Mortgage was declared to be valid. A copy of Justice Koehnen's reasons is attached as Appendix B. A copy of the costs endorsement dated March 16, 2021 is attached as Appendix C.

6. On May 31, 2021, the Honourable Justice Dunphy approved the process recommended by the Receiver in its First Report to market and sell the Properties (the "May 31 Order"). A copy of the May 31 Order is attached as Appendix D.

7. On June 25 2021, the Receiver entered into an agreement of purchase and sale with a company related to the Tenant for the sale of the Eastern Avenue Property (the "Eastern Avenue Transaction").

8. On August 5, 2021, Justice Koehnen approved the Eastern Avenue Transaction, a copy of the Approval and Vesting Order is attached as Appendix E. The Eastern Avenue Transaction was completed on September 2, 2021 for a sale price of $5.3 million.

9. After implementing the marketing and sale process for the Yonge Street Property approved under the May 31 Order, on July 22, 2021, the Receiver entered into an unconditional agreement of purchase and sale with 2434874 Ontario Ltd, in trust for a company to be incorporated (the "Yonge Street Transaction").

10. On August 12, 2021, Justice Koehnen approved the Yonge Street Transaction, with reasons to follow. A copy of the Approval and Vesting Order is attached as Appendix F. A copy of Justice Koehnen's endorsement is attached as Appendix G. The Yonge Street Transaction was completed on September 9, 2021 for a purchase price of $9.418 million.

11. Pursuant to an Order of Justice Koehnen dated September 10, 2021, the Receiver made an interim distribution of $7,609,167 on account of the First Mortgage and the costs award. Certain amounts claimed by the Applicants were disputed and hearing was scheduled on September 19, 2021 to deal with the disputed amounts. The September 10, 2021 Order of Justice Koehnen is attached as Appendix H.

12. The Honourable Justice Cavanagh heard the motion on October 19, 2021 and reserved his decision.

13. On January 17, 2022, Justice Cavanagh released his reasons allowing a substantial amount of the disputed items to be paid to the Applicants. The endorsement of Justice Cavanagh is attached as Appendix I. The Receiver distributed $1,699,563 to FCT in accordance with the costs awards and a further $2,909,754 to the Applicants at this time.

V TAX FILINGS

14. Due to the significant gains generated from the sale of the Eastern Avenue and Yonge Street Properties, it was imperative to bring Midas' tax filings up to date, in order to determine if there were income taxes payable. The Receiver retained MNP to prepare unaudited financial statements and the applicable tax returns for the 2020 and 2021 fiscal years. MNP had previously completed the tax returns for Midas.

15. The Receiver and MNP experienced significant difficulties in preparing the tax reruns due to the fact that the previous filings had been materially incorrect and material transactions were never disclosed to MNP. The most significant omission from the previous statements was that the mortgage transaction with the Applicants had never been disclosed to MNP. As a result, the mortgage payable, the accounting for the distribution of the mortgage proceeds and the resulting interest expense from the date of the mortgage advance had never been recorded. The Receiver made efforts to try and obtain information that would assist in accounting for this transaction, but was unable to obtain complete information. Additionally, certain transaction between Midas and the Eastern Avenue Property tenant where Mr. Farrell was paid $1 million directly was not disclosed to MNP.

16. The Receiver and MNP used its best efforts to complete the filings and the tax returns for 2020 and 2021 were filed. The capital gains on the sale of the real property were offset by the significant interest expense incurred and the costs award that was incurred against Midas on excess of $2 million and therefore there was no income tax payable for the periods filed.

17. The Receiver additionally brought the HST returns up to date and reported approximately $1.4 million of rent that was received in advance from the Eastern Avenue tenant on these returns.

18. Based on ongoing discussions with CRA, it is the Receiver's expectation that the income tax return for 2021 (which is within the Receiver's administration) will be audited. The HST returns are currently under audit.

19. Based on the prospect of being audited, the difficulties experienced in respect of the books and records and the nature of certain transactions during the 2021 year, the Receiver recommends that it hold significant funds in reserve to deal with any potential issues.

VI CLAIMS PROCESS

20. Pursuant to the Order of Justice Dietrich dated July 11, 2022 (the "Claims Process Order"), the Receiver undertook a claims process to deal with potential creditor claims against Midas. We attach the Claims Process Order as Appendix J.

21. In accordance with the Claims Process Order the Receiver did the following:

- Immediately posted the Notice to Claimants and the Proof of Claim form on its website;
- Sent the Claims Process documents to all known creditors of Midas;
- Sent a copy of the claims package to all parties claiming to be a creditor of Midas; and
- Advertised the Notice to Claimants in the Globe & Mail on July 18, 2022.

22. The Claims Bar Date, with the exception of CRA assessments, was August 31, 2022.
23. The Receiver received seven claims prior to the Claims Bar Date. A summary of the results of the Claims Process is presented below.

Summary of Claims

Claimant	Claim Amount	Amount Allowed	Amount Disallowed
Casa Nova Fashions Limited et al	$ 62,217.52	$62,217.52
Miller Thomson	$ 78,102.27	$78,102.27
Maurice J Neirinck & Associates	$ 1,258,504.51	$452,000.00	$816,504.51
Mills & Mills LLP	$ 5,933.24	$5,933.24
Gordon Ullman	$ 41,663.47	$41,663.47
John Kavanagh	$ 2,250,000.00		$2,250,000.00
Thomas Farrell	$ 1,922,662.54		$1,992,662.54

24. We set out a description and the disposition of each claim below:

1. Claim of Casa Nova Fashions Ltd. et al

25. The claim was filed in the in the amount of $62,217.52 by the Applicants relating to legal fees incurred in respect of the enforcement of its mortgage security. These fees were incurred subsequent to the Applicant's payout statement that was filed with the Court in respect of the motion to distribute funds and relate to the period September 24, 2021 to August 30, 2022. The claim was filed a secured claim.

Disposition of Claim

26. The legal fees of the Applicant are payable and secured under its charge and therefore the Applicants are entitled to be paid for the legal costs incurred. The claim was therefore accepted by the Receiver.

2. Claim of Miller Thomson LLP

27. Miller Thomson filed a claim in the amount of $78,103.27. The claim was on account of legal services rendered subsequent to the appointment of the Receiver. In support of its claim Miller Thomson submitted 4 completely redacted invoices for the period August 11, 2021 to August 17, 2022, which total $142,502.89.

Disposition of Claim

28. The Receiver disallowed the Miller Thomson claim on the basis that its retainer was in fact for John Kavanagh in his capacity of guarantor and not for Midas. Miller Thomson filed a Dispute Notice. Subsequently Miller Thomson provided additional information which included confirmation from Mr. Farrell that Miller Thomson was retained by Midas effective September 30, 2021. Prior to September 2021, Miller Thomson was acting solely for Mr. Kavanagh. The Receiver reviewed the invoices submitted and determined that approximately $95,102 of the invoices related to the period after September 30, 2021, an amount in excess of its claim. Given that the invoices from September 30, 2021 onwards exceeds its claim and that there will be surplus funds after the claims process the Receiver has allowed the claim.

3. Claim of Maurice J. Neirinck & Associates

29. The claim was filed in the amount of $1,258,504.41. Maurice J. Neirinck & Associates acted as legal counsel for Midas in its litigation with the mortgagees. The quantum of the claim was based on a contingency agreement that it entered into with Midas (signed by Thomas Farrell), which entitled it to a percentage of the net sale proceeds of the properties. The Receiver reviewed the agreement and the calculations provided. On October 13, 2022, Mr. Neirinck wrote to the Receiver, and advised that he was prepared to reduce his claim and accept a payment of 452,000 in satisfaction of his claim. We attach the October 13, 2022 correspondence from Mr. Neirinck as Appendix K.

Disposition of Claim

30. Based on the review of the claim, the Receiver determined that Mr. Neirinck's offer was advantageous for the residual stakeholders of Midas, and therefore allowed the claim in the amount of $452,000.

4. Claim of Mills & Mills Claim

31. The claim was filed in the amount of $5,933.24. The claim relates to legal services rendered between 2018 and 2021.

Disposition of Claim

32. The Receiver reviewed the dockets provided and has allowed the claim.

5. Claim of Gordon Ullman

33. The claim was filed in the amount of $41,663.47. The claim relates to legal services rendered by Mr. Ullman from 2016 to 2018.

Disposition of Claim

34. The Receiver has reviewed the dockets provided and has allowed the claim.

6. Claim of John Kavanagh

35. The claim was filed in the amount of $ 2,250,000. There was no documentation provided with the claim to support the claim.

36. Based on the fact that Mr. Kavanagh did not establish that he is a creditor of Midas, his claim was disallowed. We understand that Mr. Kavanagh is a shareholder of Midas and therefore may have an entitlement to any residual funds, in this capacity.

7. Claim of Thomas Farrell

37. Mr. Farrell is a shareholder of Midas. The claim was filed in the amount of $1,922,662.54. We attach the claim as Appendix L. Mr. Farrell's claims that Midas is indebted to him because he has not been fully repaid for amounts that he advanced to Midas to purchase the Eastern Avenue Property and Yonge Street Property as well as other advances he made from time to time. Mr. Farrell included with his claim information documenting transfers of funds to Midas and transfers to him from Midas directly or indirectly.

Disposition of Claim

38. The Receiver reviewed the documentation provided by Mr. Farrell and determined his claim should be disallowed in full. In arriving at the amount owing Mr. Farrell included an amount of $1,895,231.21 which represented outstanding loan balances that Mr. Farrell has with three financial institutions. These are not obligation of Midas and therefore should not be included as part of his claim. Further the most current financial statements indicate that the shareholders are indebted to Midas in an amount in excess of $2 million which is inconsistent with Mr. Farrell's claim that Midas is indebted to him. In correspondence with Mr. Farrell, he has alleged that Mr. Kavanagh and not him who has taken these funds from Midas. We understand that Mr. Kavanagh had control of the mortgage proceeds when the funds were advanced. As we did not obtain complete information on the distribution of the proceeds of the Applicant's mortgage, we could not determine the exact amounts that were withdrawn by Mr. Farrell and Mr. Kavanagh respectively. We note that Justice Koehnen , in paragraph 90 of his reasons states, "If funds were disbursed improperly from the Midas Bank account by Mr. Kavanagh or others, the fraud or lack of authorization lies not in the mortgage but in the misuse of funds generated by the mortgage. This is not something for which the defendants, other than potentially Mr. Kavanagh, are responsible. Mr. Farrell filed a Notice of Dispute which we attach as Appendix M. We attach the Receiver's correspondence to Mr. Farrell dated January 16, 2023 as Appendix N.

39. The Receiver recommends the following in respect of the claims process:

- (a) That a distribution be made forthwith in respect of the accepted claims. We attach a schedule as Appendix O exhibiting the proposed distribution; and
- (b) Given the dispute between them, the claims of Messrs. Kavanagh and Farrell be treated as equity claims and not creditor claims in respect to their respective entitlement to any residual funds.

VII. ACTIVITIES OF THE RECEIVER

40. The activities of the Receiver since the Sixth Report include:

- Dealing with FCT claim;
- Ongoing communications with CRA;
- Dealing with MNP in respect of the completion of outstanding financial statements and tax returns including compiling information, meetings and correspondence with MNP, exchange of emails; telephone calls and meetings and review of financial statements and tax returns
- Communications with John Kavanagh and his counsel;
- Communications with Thomas Farrell;
- Dealing with Claims Process’
- Prepare statutory filings;
- Dealing with HST returns and audit of same; and

VIII. STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS

41. We attach as Appendix P, the Receiver statement of receipts and disbursements to January 18, 2023. The current amount on hand is $2,054, 440.

IX. RECEIVER’S RECOMMENDATION

42. On the basis of the foregoing, the Receiver respectfully requests that this Honourable Court grant the relief requested in paragraph 3 of this Seventh Report.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

Dated at Toronto, Ontario, this 19th day of January, 2023

7. THIS COURT ORDERS that no proceeding or enforcement process in any court or tribunal (each, a "Proceeding"), shall be commenced or continued against the Receiver except with the written consent of the Receiver or with leave of this Court.

NO PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE DEBTOR OR THE PROPERTY

8. THIS COURT ORDERS that no Proceeding against or in respect of the Debtor or the Property shall be commenced or continued except with the written consent of the Receiver or with leave of this Court and any and all Proceedings currently under way against or in respect of the Debtor or the Property are hereby stayed and suspended pending further Order of this Court.

NO EXERCISE OF RIGHTS OR REMEDIES

9. THIS COURT ORDERS that all rights and remedies against the Debtor, Receiver, or affecting the Property, are hereby stayed and suspended except with the written consent of the Receiver or leave of this Court, provided however that this stay and suspension does not apply in respect of any "eligible financial contract" as defined in the BIA, and further provided that nothing in this paragraph shall (i) empower the Receiver or the Debtor to carry on any business which the Debtor is not lawfully entitled to carry on, (ii) exempt the Receiver or the Debtor from compliance with statutory or regulatory provisions relating to health, safety or the environment, (iii) prevent the filing of any registration to preserve or perfect a security interest, or (iv) prevent the registration of a claim for lien.

NO INTERFERENCE WITH THE RECEIVER

10. THIS COURT ORDERS that no Person shall discontinue, fail to honour, alter, interfere with, repudiate, terminate or cease to perform any right, renewal right, contract, agreement, licence or permit in favour of or held by the Debtor, without written consent of the Receiver or leave of this Court.

CONTINUATION OF SERVICES

11. THIS COURT ORDERS that all Persons having oral or written agreements with the Debtor or statutory or regulatory mandates for the supply of goods and/or services, including without limitation, all computer software, communication and other data services, centralized banking services, payroll services, insurance, transportation services, utility or other services to the Debtor are hereby restrained until further Order of this Court from discontinuing, altering, interfering with or terminating the supply of such goods or services as may be required by the Receiver, and that the Receiver shall be entitled to the continued use of the Debtor's current telephone numbers, facsimile numbers, internet addresses and domain names, provided in each case that the normal prices or charges for all such goods or services received after the date of this Order are paid by the Receiver in accordance with normal payment practices of the Debtor or such other practices as may be agreed upon by the supplier or service provider and the Receiver, or as may be ordered by this Court.

RECEIVER TO HOLD FUNDS

12. THIS COURT ORDERS that all funds, monies, cheques, instruments, and other forms of payments received or collected by the Receiver from and after the making of this Order from any source whatsoever, including without limitation the sale of all or any of the Property and the collection of any accounts receivable in whole or in part, whether in existence on the date of this Order or hereafter coming into existence, shall be deposited into one or more new accounts to be opened by the Receiver (the "Post Appointment Accounts") and the monies standing to the credit of such Post Appointment Accounts from time to time, net of any disbursements provided for herein, shall be held by the Receiver to be paid in accordance with the terms of this Order or any further Order of this Court.

EMPLOYEES

13. THIS COURT ORDERS that all employees of the Debtor shall remain the employees of the Debtor until such time as the Receiver, on the Debtor's behalf, may terminate the employment of such employees. The Receiver shall not be liable for any employee-related liabilities, including any successor employer liabilities as provided for in section 14.06(1.2) of the BIA, other than such amounts as the Receiver may specifically agree in writing to pay, or in respect of its obligations under sections 81.4(5) or 81.6(3) of the BIA or under the Wage Earner Protection Program Act.

LIMITATION ON ENVIRONMENTAL LIABILITIES

14. THIS COURT ORDERS that nothing herein contained shall require the Receiver to occupy or to take control, care, charge, possession or management (separately and/or collectively, "Possession") of any of the Property that might be environmentally contaminated, might be a pollutant or a contaminant, or might cause or contribute to a spill, discharge, release or deposit of a substance contrary to any federal, provincial or other law respecting the protection, conservation, enhancement, remediation or rehabilitation of the environment or relating to the disposal of waste or other contamination including, without limitation, the Canadian Environmental Protection Act, the Ontario Environmental Protection Act, the Ontario Water Resources Act, or the Ontario Occupational Health and Safety Act and regulations thereunder (the "Environmental Legislation"), provided however that nothing herein shall exempt the Receiver from any duty to report or make disclosure imposed by applicable Environmental Legislation. The Receiver shall not, as a result of this Order or anything done in pursuance of the Receiver's duties and powers under this Order, be deemed to be in Possession of any of the Property within the meaning of any Environmental Legislation, unless it is actually in possession.

LIMITATION ON THE RECEIVER'S LIABILITY

15. THIS COURT ORDERS that the Receiver shall incur no liability or obligation as a result of its appointment or the carrying out the provisions of this Order, save and except for any gross negligence or wilful misconduct on its part, or in respect of its obligations under sections 81.4(5) or 81.6(3) of the BIA or under the Wage Earner Protection Program Act. Nothing in this Order shall derogate from the protections afforded the Receiver by section 14.06 of the BIA or by any other applicable legislation.

RECEIVER'S ACCOUNTS

16. THIS COURT ORDERS that the Receiver and counsel to the Receiver shall be paid their reasonable fees and disbursements, in each case at their standard rates and charges unless otherwise ordered by the Court on the passing of accounts, and that the Receiver and counsel to the Receiver shall be entitled to and are hereby granted a charge (the "Receiver's Charge") on the Property, as security for such fees and disbursements, both before and after the making of this Order in respect of these proceedings, and that the Receiver's Charge shall form a first charge on the Property in priority to all security interests, trusts, liens, charges and encumbrances, statutory or otherwise, in favour of any Person, but subject to sections 14.06(7), 81.4(4), and 81.6(2) of the BIA.

17. THIS COURT ORDERS that the Receiver and its legal counsel shall pass their accounts from time to time, and for this purpose the accounts of the Receiver and its legal counsel are hereby referred to a judge of the Commercial List of the Ontario Superior Court of Justice.

18. THIS COURT ORDERS that prior to the passing of its accounts, the Receiver shall be at liberty from time to time to apply reasonable amounts, out of the monies in its hands, against its fees and disbursements, including legal fees and disbursements, incurred at the standard rates and charges of the Receiver or its counsel, and such amounts shall constitute advances against its remuneration and disbursements when and as approved by this Court.

FUNDING OF THE RECEIVERSHIP

19. THIS COURT ORDERS that the Receiver be at liberty and it is hereby empowered to borrow by way of a revolving credit or otherwise, such monies from time to time as it may consider necessary or desirable, provided that the outstanding principal amount does not exceed $500,000.00 (or such greater amount as this Court may by further Order authorize) at any time, at such rate or rates of interest as it deems advisable for such period or periods of time as it may arrange, for the purpose of funding the exercise of the powers and duties conferred upon the Receiver by this Order, including interim expenditures. The whole of the Property shall be and is hereby charged by way of a fixed and specific charge (the “Receiver’s Borrowings Charge”) as security for the payment of the monies borrowed, together with interest and charges thereon, in priority to all security interests, trusts, liens, charges and encumbrances, statutory or otherwise, in favour of any Person, but subordinate in priority to the Receiver’s Charge and the charges as set out in sections 14.06(7), 81.4(4), and 81.6(2) of the BIA.

20. THIS COURT ORDERS that neither the Receiver’s Borrowings Charge nor any other security granted by the Receiver in connection with its borrowings under this Order shall be enforced without leave of this Court.

21. THIS COURT ORDERS that the Receiver is at liberty and authorized to issue certificates substantially in the form annexed as Schedule “B” hereto (the “Receiver’s Certificates”) for any amount borrowed by it pursuant to this Order.

22. THIS COURT ORDERS that the monies from time to time borrowed by the Receiver pursuant to this Order or any further order of this Court and any and all Receiver’s Certificates evidencing the same or any part thereof shall rank on a pari passu basis, unless otherwise agreed to by the holders of any prior issued Receiver’s Certificates.

KOEHNEN J.

I. Overview

- [1] This action concerns the validity of two mortgages, each of which was registered against two properties in the city of Toronto: 205 Yonge Street and 90 Eastern Avenue.
- [2] The first mortgage in the amount of $800,000 was registered on February 6, 2013. The second mortgage was registered on March 4, 2013 in the amount of $5,000,000. Its proceeds were used, among other things, to pay out the first mortgage.
- [3] The plaintiffs allege that the mortgages were registered by the defendant John Kavanagh without authorization and that the remaining defendants had actual knowledge of the lack of authorization by virtue of discrepancies in documents that they received which discrepancies they should have noticed. Had the defendants noticed the discrepancies and made further inquiries, the plaintiffs say Mr. Kavanagh's deception would have come to light and fraud would have been prevented. I am unable to agree and dismiss the plaintiffs' claim.
- [4] The corporation's bylaws gave Mr. Kavanagh actual authority to bind the corporation acting on his own. That alone should dispose of the action.
- [5] Mr. Farrell trusted Mr. Kavanagh and gave him considerable discretion in the management of Mr. Farrell's affairs. Giving him the power to bind Midas was consistent with that practice.
- [6] Mr. Farrell was in considerable financial difficulty in both Canada and Ireland. One way out of those difficulties was to mortgage the two properties and use the proceeds to pay off debts. That is exactly what was done. In the course of doing so, Mr. Farrell, Mr. Kavanagh and Renato Fellin developed a plan whereby they would try to insulate Mr. Farrell's

Canadian assets from his Irish creditors by removing him from the record books of Midas. Mr. Farrell was fully aware of the steps taken to mortgage the properties and benefited from the mortgages. Mr. Farrell's conduct after discovering the alleged fraud is inconsistent with what one would expect from someone who had been defrauded.

- [7] Even if I am incorrect in my assessment of Mr. Farrell's knowledge of the mortgages, the fact that Mr. Kavanagh had the ability to bind the corporation and the fact that a good portion of the mortgage proceeds were clearly to the benefit of the plaintiffs is sufficient to dismiss the plaintiffs' claim.
- [8] In the event I am incorrect on the question of authority and Mr. Farrell's knowledge of the mortgage, I have also addressed the plaintiffs' claims against Colina King and the mortgagees.
- [9] Ms. King was the lawyer that Mr. Kavanagh retained to register the mortgages. I find that her conduct did not breach the standard of a prudent solicitor in the circumstances of this case. In the alternative, if her conduct did breach the standard of a prudent solicitor, her application of the appropriate standard would not have prevented the registration of the mortgages.
- [10] The plaintiffs' claim against the mortgagees fails because the mortgagees were entitled to rely on Mr. Kavanagh's authority under the indoor management rule. In addition, the mortgagees had no actual knowledge of any wrongdoing in connection with the mortgage. At best the plaintiffs' claim is that the mortgagees were put on notice and should have made additional inquiries. That is not, however, legally sufficient to prevent the mortgagees from enforcing their mortgage. Finally, the plaintiffs claim that the mortgages were conditional on satisfactory appraisals and leases being produced for the Yonge Street property. The appraisals and leases contained irregularities which the plaintiffs claim should have led the mortgagees to make further inquiries. The law is clear that conditions of this sort are for the sole benefit of the mortgagee. The mortgagee is free to waive those benefits at will. Conditions of that sort do not impose any duty on a mortgagee to conduct a forensic analysis of the documents provided in order to protect the mortgagor.

a. The Parties

- [11] The plaintiff, Thomas Farrell is a 71-year-old Irish businessperson who lives in Ireland. He testified that he went to school until age 10, does not read or write English, worked at various odd jobs after leaving school including as a farmhand, contractor, roofer and ultimately as a mechanic. He then developed his own business initially acquiring a gas station. He parlayed that into a group of nine gas stations with convenience stores, three car dealerships and approximately 70 Properties in Ireland that he rents out for income. He says he has his staff or family members, particularly his daughter Jackie, read documents to him. In a similar vein, he dictates documents to them to write on his behalf. When, in these reasons, I refer to emails from Mr. Farrell, they were prepared in this manner.

- [12] The plaintiff Midas Investment Corporation is the owner of the two properties at issue in this action. It was incorporated to purchase the 205 Yonge St. property and later acquired the Eastern Avenue property.
- [13] The defendant John Kavanagh is an Irish accountant. Before beginning to work for Mr. Farrell, he worked at Coopers Lybrand in Ireland. By the time Midas acquired the Yonge Street property, Mr. Kavanagh had been working for Mr. Farrell as his in-house accountant for approximately 16 years. They appear to have had a close and trusting relationship.
- [14] Mr. Kavanagh was responsible for placing the mortgage on the Yonge Street and Eastern Avenue properties. Mr. Farrell takes the position that he did so without his knowledge or authorization.
- [15] The defendant Colina King is the lawyer that Mr. Kavanagh retained to mortgage the two properties.
- [16] The defendant Bill Shimbashi is a real estate valuator who prepared an appraisal for the Yonge Street property. The action has been settled against him.
- [17] The defendants 1888871 Ontario Inc. and Carlo Parentela were sometime potential tenants of the Yonge Street property. The action has been settled against them.
- [18] The defendant C & K Mortgage Services Inc. operating as Rescom Capital is a mortgage broker that was involved in funding and registering the two mortgages. The defendant Gary Gruneir is the principal of Rescom. The action has been settled against both Rescom and Mr. Gruneir.
- [19] The remaining defendants are all mortgagees under the impugned mortgages.

b. Credibility and Reliability Issues

- [20] My decision in this case turns largely on my assessment of the Mr. Farrell's credibility and reliability. Mr. Farrell's explanations frequently contradicted themselves, contradicted the contents of contemporaneous documents or seemed logically improbable.
- [21] Mr. Farrell had a tendency to deny signing documents when it no longer appeared convenient to have his signature on the documents, denied that his legal or accounting advisors brought something to his attention or denied that those he trusted to read documents and report to him actually did so when the denial seemed highly improbable.
- [22] He also evidenced an unfortunate pattern of assuming debt, renegeing on the debt and then using aggressive delaying tactics to persuade the creditor to accept less than the amount owing.
- [23] Whether these tendencies result from a lack of credibility because Mr. Farrell is willing to tailor his evidence to whatever he believes is convenient at a particular moment, or whether they are the result of a lack of reliability because Mr. Farrell's inability to read deprives him of the visual cues that assist memory, does not matter. Whatever the source of the evidentiary frailty, where Mr. Farrell's evidence conflicts with that of other witnesses who testified at trial, I prefer the evidence of the other witnesses.

- [24] While I have sympathy for the challenges that an inability to read causes, that inability cannot excuse Mr. Farrell from responsibility for obligations that he and/or Midas have assumed. Mr. Farrell is a man of considerable means. He testified that his net worth had been estimated at approximately €100,000,000. An individual with even a fraction of that wealth has the means to ensure that he is made aware of issues that face him. If he is genuinely not made aware of those issues because a string of lawyers, accountants, business advisors and family members truly did not read documents to him, then that is unfortunate but it does not mean that he should be excused from his obligations nor does it mean that others, like the mortgagees in this case, should bear those obligations for him.

II. Authority of John Kavanagh to Register the Mortgages

a. Mr. Kavanagh as Trusted Advisor

- [25] The principal issue in this proceeding is whether John Kavanagh had actual or ostensible authority to register two mortgages against the Yonge Street and Eastern Avenue properties.
- [26] Mr. Farrell takes the position that the mortgages were unauthorized, that he played no role in them and that they were the result of fraudulent actions by Mr. Kavanagh.
- [27] For me the case resolves itself on the question of actual authority. For the reasons set out below, I find as a fact that Mr. Kavanagh had actual authority to register the mortgages.
- [28] When Midas purchased the Yonge Street property, Mr. Kavanagh had been working for Mr. Farrell for approximately 16 years. Despite Mr. Farrell's sometimes contradictory evidence, I find that he trusted Mr. Kavanagh and gave Mr. Kavanagh considerable discretionary scope to run Mr. Farrell's affairs. At one point Mr. Farrell agreed that Mr. Kavanagh had become a trusted employee. Mr. Kavanagh took care of the accounting, financial statements and tax returns of all of Mr. Farrell's five businesses. Mr. Farrell had come to rely on Mr. Kavanagh.
- [29] In September 2006, Mr. Farrell was in Toronto on a promotional trip arranged by the Suzuki Motor Company, one of whose automobile dealerships Mr. Farrell owned in Ireland. Mr. Farrell asked Mr. Kavanagh to accompany him to Canada for companionship and in case any documents needed to be read. He chose Mr. Kavanagh to accompany him above his wife or children who also helped with the business. During the course of that trip Mr. Farrell saw the Yonge Street property and decided to purchase it.
- [30] At trial, Mr. Farrell tried to downplay Mr. Kavanagh's role with the Yonge Street property. Mr. Farrell essentially tried to describe Mr. Kavanagh as a caretaker who was responsible for attending to basic maintenance work on the property. Contemporaneous documentation gives Mr. Kavanagh a significantly more material role.

- [31] The agreement of purchase and sale was entered into by “John Kavanagh in trust”. The purchase was ultimately made in the name of Midas.
- [32] Mr. Kavanagh accompanied Mr. Farrell when he opened the bank account for Midas at TD Bank and was given signing authority over the account. In addition, Mr. Farrell gave Mr. Kavanagh blank signed checks on Midas company bank accounts and allowed Mr. Kavanagh to fill them in.

b. Mr. Kavanagh’s Authority Under the Articles and By-Laws

- [33] The law firm of Loopstra Nixon was retained for the purchase and to incorporate Midas.
- [34] Midas’ share capital consisted of 100 common shares at a subscription price of one dollar each. Mr. Farrell and Mr. Kavanagh held 50 shares each. Mr. Kavanagh was also appointed as Secretary and Treasurer and was recorded as such on the corporation’s Form 1 which constitutes the formal public record of the corporation’s directors and officers.
- [35] Loopstra Nixon addressed its reporting letter to both Mr. Kavanagh and Mr. Farrell. The reporting letter set out that each of Mr. Farrell and Mr. Kavanagh held 50 shares for consideration of $50. It listed the officers of the Corporation as follows:

President – Thomas Farrell
Secretary – John Kavanagh
Treasurer – John Kavanagh

- [36] The reporting letter directed the reader to section 11 of By-Law Number one for guidance on signing authority. Section 11.01 of By-Law Number one reads in part:

Deeds, transfers, assignments, contracts, and obligations of the Corporation may be signed by the president or a vice-president or a director or the secretary or treasurer or an assistant secretary or assistant treasurer.

- [37] In other words, Mr. Kavanagh as the Secretary or Treasurer could sign any such documents on behalf of Midas. It is especially noteworthy that the provision originally required that such documents be signed by the “president or a vice-president or a director together with the secretary or treasurer”. The words “together with” were struck out and replaced by the word or. In other words, the standard form by-law used by Loopstra Nixon would not have allowed Mr. Kavanagh to sign documents alone. Striking out the words “together with” and replacing them with “or” allowed Mr. Kavanagh to sign documents alone.
- [38] Although Mr. Farrell took the position that he never had anyone read the reporting letter to him, he admitted that the lawyer at Loopstra Nixon who handled the purchase and incorporation knew that Mr. Farrell could not read and ran through the documents with him.

- [39] At trial, Mr. Farrell took the position that By-Law Number one was invalid because the signatures above the entries where his typewritten name appeared at the end of the By-Law were not actually his. During his examination for discovery he had acknowledged that the signatures were his.
- [40] In addition, the plaintiffs took the position at trial that By-Law Number one was not validly enacted because it was not signed by the second director at the time, John D'Agostino. I do not find this argument persuasive. Just beneath the signature line for Mr. D'Agostino is a paragraph indicating that, in lieu of confirmation at a general meeting of shareholders, the undersigned, being all of the shareholders, confirm the by-law. The signatures of Messrs. Farrell and Kavanagh follow. Section 116 of the Ontario Business Corporations Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. B.16 (the "OBCA") requires shareholder approval for by-laws. Moreover, Mr. D'Agostino's missing signature on By-Law Number one did not prevent the plaintiffs from affirming in the Agreed Statement of Facts prepared for this trial that Midas had passed the by-law.
- [41] By-Law Number two is the Midas borrowing by-law. Among other things, it authorizes the board to borrow money and to delegate any of its powers under By-Law Number two to any officer of the Corporation. Mr. Farrell has no memory of it being passed and denies the presence of his signature on the by-law. It does not surprise me that Mr. Farrell does not recall the by-law being passed. It is dated December 15, 2006. The trial occurred in February 2020. It would not be at all unusual that someone would no longer have a specific recollection of having signed a document 14 years earlier. Mr. Farrell takes the position, however, that the absence of a signature that he acknowledges to be his on the borrowing by-law renders the by-law invalid. I disagree.
- [42] I came to the conclusion during the course of the trial that Mr. Farrell tended to assert that his signature had been forged on a document when the document was not convenient for him to have signed but agreed to his signature when it was convenient. When Mr. Farrell denied his signature, he never once identified anything in the allegedly falsified signature that led him to conclude that it was a forgery. Nor has Mr. Farrell introduced evidence from any handwriting expert to distinguish true signatures from false ones.
- [43] I find as a fact that Mr. Farrell signed and approved both By-Laws one and two.
- [44] Moreover, the concern about By-Law Number two is a bit of a red herring because it is unnecessary. Under s. 15 of the OBCA, a corporation has all of the powers of a natural person including the power to borrow money. Section 17(1) of the OBCA provides that it is not necessary for a by-law to be passed to confer any particular power on the corporation or its directors. By-Law Number one, which at discovery Mr. Farrell acknowledged he had signed, already allows Mr. Kavanagh to sign a variety of documents on behalf of the corporation, including lending documents.

- [45] In 2008, Midas purchased the Eastern Avenue property. The Loopstra Nixon reporting letter for the Eastern Avenue purchase indicates that all contacts between the firm and Midas occurred through Mr. Kavanagh. Mr. Farrell's name does not appear in the detailed account entries. Mr. Farrell had no explanation for that at trial and asserted that Mr. Kavanagh was having these interactions on his own initiative. I do not find that evidence credible. Mr. Farrell knew that the Eastern Avenue property was being purchased. He had negotiated the business deal with the vendor himself. He knew he would require a lawyer to complete the purchase. While suggesting that Mr. Kavanagh had no authority from Mr. Farrell to deal with Loopstra Nixon is consistent with Mr. Farrell's narrative to characterize Mr. Kavanagh as a caretaker, it is simply not believable. I infer from the circumstances that Mr. Farrell explicitly or implicitly authorized Mr. Kavanagh to deal with Loopstra Nixon.
- [46] To this point in the narrative, Mr. Kavanagh is a trusted confidant of Mr. Farrell's who was authorized to deal with lawyers and banks on behalf of Midas and whom the by-laws of Midas empowered to bind the corporation.

c. The Development of Financial Difficulties

- [47] Although the Eastern Avenue property was rented out, the Yonge Street property never had a tenant. It did, however, incur operating costs of approximately $300,000 per year without a regular stream of income to pay them.
- [48] Shortly after purchasing the Yonge Street property, Midas began falling into arrears on property taxes.
- [49] As Mr. Farrell described it, in 2011 he left it to his Canadian accountant, Mr. Rudensky to solve the issue and send cheques to the city to pay the tax bill. Mr. Farrell had given Mr. Rudensky six cheques of $19,000 for a total of $114,000 based on his unilateral calculation of the taxes owing. At that point, tax arrears stood at approximately $380,000. The only way that the six cheques would solve the tax issue was if the city accepted the manner in which Mr. Farrell had unilaterally calculated certain rebates to which he felt he was entitled. The city had consistently refused to accept that calculation.
- [50] Mr. Farrell claims he was unaware of any further tax arrears after 2011. The issue is important because of the $800,000 advanced on the first mortgage, over $600,000 was used to pay off tax arrears. That portion of the mortgage was therefore clearly to the plaintiffs' benefit.
- [51] Although Mr. Farrell states that he was not aware of any subsequent tax arrears, a witness was called from the City of Toronto tax department who testified to the effect and produced documents demonstrating that the city had sent over 40 tax arrears notices to Mr. Farrell at his home in Ireland. As time went on, the notices became more forceful and culminated in steps to sell the property for tax arrears. Mr. Farrell claims he was never told about any of the 40 tax notices. In addition, tax arrears notices were also sent to Mr. Farrell's accountant, Mr. Rudensky. Mr. Farrell claims that Mr. Rudensky never informed him of any of those notices. However, Mr. Farrell's daughter Jackie, the family member who helped him most with his businesses, did forward an overdue tax notice to Mr. Rudensky that showed tax arrears of $471,000 in August 2011. This clearly demonstrates that the tax notices reached Mr. Farrell's home. Although Jackie forwarded at least one tax notice to Mr. Rudensky, Mr. Farrell claimed that Jackie never brought any tax notices to his attention.

- [52] Although Mr. Farrell testified that his daughter Jackie never brought any of the 40 tax notices to his attention, and although Jackie continues to work for him, she did not testify at trial. According to Mr. Farrell she could not do so because her teenage daughter has a serious eating disorder and requires her mother's presence to encourage her to eat. No request was made to allow Jackie to testify by videoconference at trial or by pre-recorded video at a time more convenient to her.
- [53] At the same time as tax arrears were growing, Mr. Farrell claimed that the rebates owing in his favour would eliminate the outstanding taxes. The evidence does not support that. The annual tax bill remained considerably larger than even what Mr. Farrell claims he was entitled to by way of rebates.
- [54] Mr. Farrell dismissed the tax issues by saying that he would have expected Mr. Rudensky to obtain a tax clearance certificate because Mr. Farrell had told Mr. Rudensky to have the taxes paid. It is difficult to understand how that could be possible without sufficient funds.
- [55] The City's tax records also disclose numerous instances of Mr. Kavanagh communicating with the City either in person or by telephone about the tax arrears. Those records contain similar communications with Mr. Rudensky.
- [56] Mr. Farrell maintained that, had he known of the tax arrears of $600,000, he would simply have paid them off. I do not accept that evidence. Even when tax arrears stood at only $380,000, Mr. Farrell was not prepared to provide enough money to pay them off.
- [57] In addition to tax arrears, by September 2012, construction liens had also been placed on the Yonge Street property. In September 2012, Mr. Kavanagh appeared in court on behalf of Midas to adjourn the lien claimants' efforts to force a sale of the property. Mr. Kavanagh asked for time to find financing to pay off the liens. Mr. Farrell claims not to have been aware of that.
- [58] Mr. Farrell also had creditors in Ireland who were becoming ever more forceful. The Allied Irish Bank ("AIB") had obtained a judgment against him for approximately €4,500,000. The judgment related to a mortgage on three properties in Ireland in respect of which Mr. Farrell had never made any payments. The bank had begun taking steps to enforce its judgment. In addition, Esso Oil demanded payment of €580,000 from Mr. Farrell.

d. Renato Fellin and the Plan to "Remove" Mr. Farrell from Midas

- [59] In 2011, Mr. Kavanagh had encountered difficulties with construction contractors on the Yonge Street property. His search for a solution to those problems led him, through a mutual acquaintance, to Renato Fellin.
- [60] This ultimately led to a meeting between Mr. Fellin, Mr. Kavanagh and Mr. Farrell sometime in 2011. During the course of that discussion, Mr. Fellin became aware of Mr. Farrell's problems with AIB and Esso in Ireland. Mr. Farrell asked for his help with those issues and asked him to help Mr. Kavanagh with the Yonge Street property.
- [61] Mr. Fellin's understanding was that Mr. Kavanagh was doing the best he could with a limited budget. Mr. Fellin advised Mr. Kavanagh to clear up the tax arrears and mortgage the property to do so.
- [62] By mid-2012 it is agreed that Mr. Kavanagh began looking for mortgage financing on the property. Mr. Fellin also made extensive efforts to find financing.
- [63] According to Mr. Fellin, he retained Bill Shimbashi, a real estate valuator to prepare an appraisal. Mr. Fellin produced invoices from Mr. Shimbashi to corroborate his evidence.
- [64] Mr. Fellin says he met Mr. Farrell on numerous occasions at various restaurants and bars throughout Toronto to discuss his problems with his Irish creditors.
- [65] Mr. Fellin says he discussed changes to the board and shareholdings of Midas with Messrs. Farrell and Kavanagh on several occasions. Mr. Fellin says he advised Mr. Farrell to remove himself as a director and shareholder of Midas in order to protect Mr. Farrell's Canadian assets from Irish creditors. If Mr. Farrell was facing bankruptcy or execution issues in Ireland and wanted to protect his Canadian assets, he needed to move himself out of those assets and put someone else in in his place. I understood the concept to be that someone else would hold Mr. Farrell's assets in a secret, informal trust to hide them from creditors, although Mr. Fellin did not use that specific language.
- [66] Mr. Fellin understood that Mr. Kavanagh was putting this plan into place.
- [67] The plaintiffs dispute Mr. Fellin's testimony and ask me to prefer the testimony of Mr. Farrell. Mr. Fellin was called as a witness by the mortgagees. During cross-examination, counsel for the plaintiffs pursued a direct attack on his credibility.
- [68] Mr. Fellin was disbarred as a lawyer. The decision disbaring him described Mr. Fellin as having engaged in trickery, outright dishonesty and as being ungovernable. After being disbarred, Mr. Fellin became a mortgage broker. His mortgage broker's license was later revoked after he provided false information to his regulator. Mr. Fellin no longer operates under his real name but operates under the pseudonym of Walter Rossi.
- [69] Despite this admittedly challenged ethical history, I nevertheless prefer Mr. Fellin's evidence over that of Mr. Farrell.
- [70] Mr. Farrell tried to downplay his relationship with Mr. Fellin and his involvement with Mr. Farrell's creditors. Mr. Farrell dismissed Mr. Fellin as one of a number of people who had purported to offer help and dismissed his efforts as “pie-in-the-sky” but if something came of it, Mr. Farrell was content to go along with it. Contemporaneous documents tell a very different story. A string of email correspondence which will be examined later in these reasons shows Mr. Farrell was deeply involved in Mr. Fellin’s efforts and shows Mr. Farrell pressing Mr. Fellin with a level of urgency and frequency that is completely inconsistent with Mr. Farrell’s attempts to downplay Mr. Fellin’s role.

- [71] In addition, Mr. Fellin’s explanation about why Mr. Farrell should remove himself as an officer, director and shareholder of Midas was consistent with Mr. Farrell’s own concerns.
- [72] Mr. Farrell testified that in Ireland it is possible to conduct a global search to determine whether an individual is a director of any corporations by entering the individual’s name into a particular database. The search result then lists all of the corporations of which that individual is a director. Mr. Farrell thought that this was the case in Canada as well. If it were the case in Canada, it would have allowed any creditor to enter Mr. Farrell’s name into the Canadian equivalent of the Irish database and discover that Mr. Farrell was a director of Midas. That could lead his Irish creditors to the Yonge Street and Eastern Avenue properties.
- [73] I will provide additional reasons for preferring the evidence of Mr. Fellin in paragraphs 114 to 125 below when the evidentiary groundwork for those reasons has been developed.
- [74] Given that contemporaneous documents referred to Mr. Rossi rather than to Mr. Fellin and given that all witnesses knew him as Mr. Rossi, I will refer to Mr. Fellin by his pseudonym of Mr. Rossi in the remainder of these reasons.

e. Events of October 2012 – March 2013

- [75] Mr. Rossi had been active in finding financing for Midas throughout 2012. By October, 2012 Mr. Kavanagh had retained Colina King to act as Midas’ counsel on the registration of the mortgages. Ms. King began corresponding with Mr. Kavanagh and Mr. Rossi about documentation necessary for the mortgage.
- [76] On November 14, 2012 a new Form 1 Notice of Change was filed in respect of Midas. It removed Mr. Farrell and the Canadian resident director Mr. Papastamos as directors of Midas and replaced them with Mr. Kavanagh alone. In addition, it removed Mr. Farrell as President and left Mr. Kavanagh as the only officer. Ms. King knew Mr. Kavanagh as the sole shareholder of Midas, consistent with Mr. Rossi’s proposal.
- [77] In the fall of 2012, Mr. Rossi introduced Midas to the mortgagee defendants. The initial contact was between Mr. Rossi and Arthur Kraus, a mortgage broker who worked in the office of Gary Gruneir through whose company mortgage financing was ultimately provided. By mid-December Mr. Rossi was providing documents to Mr. Gruneir, attended a site visit with Mr. Gruneir and gave Mr. Gruneir access to the Yonge Street property. Mr. Gruneir believed Mr. Rossi was an employee of Midas because Mr. Rossi was involved in the details of the loan to an extent that the borrower would usually be. Mr. Rossi would, for example, deliver things personally to Mr. Gruneir and would follow up on the status of the mortgage and the timing of advances.

- [78] By December 2012, Mr. Farrell's Irish creditors were becoming more aggressive. Although Esso had reached a settlement with Mr. Farrell pursuant to which it would accept €350,000 in satisfaction of its €580,000 claim, the Agreed Statement of Facts filed for this trial indicates that the €350,000 had to be paid by the close of business on December 21, 2012. Mr. Farrell denied this at trial, claimed he had 12 months to pay the Esso settlement and asserted that the Agreed Statement of Facts was wrong.
- [79] By December 18, 2012 Mr. Rossi was having conversations with the lawyers for AIB to purchase the debt Mr. Farrell owed to the bank. Mr. Farrell admits that he told Mr. Rossi to contact the lawyers for the bank to purchase the debt. The overall plan was that Mr. Farrell was trying to get into a better position with the bank by having someone purchase the debt but that he would still need to negotiate terms with the purchaser.
- [80] By January, 2013 Mr. Rossi was contacting the lawyers for Esso to make inquiries about purchasing the already reduced €350,000 debt that Mr. Farrell owed Esso at a further discount.
- [81] Mr. Farrell claims not to know where Mr. Fellin would get the money to purchase either the AIB or the Esso debt.
- [82] The overall plan seems to have been for Mr. Rossi to pose as a member of an investment fund that purchased distressed debt at a discount. Mr. Rossi admits that this was a fiction and that he was not involved with any such fund.
- [83] On February 5, 2013 Mr. Rossi wrote to Ms. King sending her a Form 1 that was filed on January 23, 2013. In doing so, Mr. Rossi explained that the January 23 filing was required because the earlier filing showed only John Kavanagh as a director and that Mr. Kavanagh had received a notice from the ministry to the effect that they were "going to kill the company because of the lack of Canadian director" as a result of which Mr. Papastamos was put back on the board as a resident Canadian director. This is consistent with Mr. Rossi helping implement the plan to remove Mr. Farrell from his Canadian assets.
- [84] The first mortgage of $800,000 was registered on February 6, 2013. Of that amount, just over $660,000 was paid to the city of Toronto for outstanding taxes and just shy of $115,000 was paid to Ms. King in trust. Of the amount paid to Ms. King, just over $96,000 was to be paid to construction lien claimants. In other words, approximately 760,000 of the $800,000 mortgage was used for legitimate purposes of Midas and protected the assets of Midas from seizure by creditors. It was in Mr. Farrell's interest that the properties be protected from seizure.
- [85] Mr. Farrell was in Canada between February 11 and February 19, 2013. On February 14 he met with Mr. Rossi. He followed up the next day by email asking for a copy of correspondence between Mr. Rossi and AIB.

[86] On February 25, 2013 Mr. Farrell wrote to Mr. Rossi in connection with his negotiations with AIB stating:

I cannot stress to you enough the urgency of this matter, it must end this week with AIB and by this week I mean up to noon on Thursday 28th of February 2013.

I await hearing from you.”

[87] By March 1, 2013 Mr. Farrell was writing Mr. Rossi stating:

I cannot stress to you enough how important it is to secure a final settlement with AIB. Please could you keep me posted on any emails/letters that you sent to AIB and received from AIB.

I would like to thank you for your input to date, I do realize that I am pressuring you a slight bit but I just want to get this matter resolved.

[88] The parties prepared several agreements in pursuit of discussions with AIB including confidentiality agreements, business agreements, directions and releases. Mr. Farrell shared correspondence between himself and his own lawyer with Mr. Rossi.

[89] The $5,000,000 mortgage was registered on March 4, 2013. The funds were dispersed as follows:

- (i) $3,043,674.92 was paid to Midas of which, $1,500,000 was paid to Peter Vroon, a Dutch business person from whom Mr. Farrell had borrowed money. Mr. Farrell acknowledged at trial that the repayment of this amounts to Mr. Vroon was of benefit to him and had to be taken into account somehow in the disposition of the action.
- (ii) $804,095.30 was paid to discharge the first mortgage of $800,000.
- (iii) $250,000 representing six months of prepaid interest on the $5,000,000 was paid to the mortgagee.
- (iv) $49,500 representing six months of property taxes was paid to the mortgagee to ensure taxes would be paid.
- (v) $100,868.18 was paid to discharge a writ of seizure and sale
- (vi) $68,808 was paid to Ms. King.

A further $300,000 advance was delivered to Ms. King in May which she in turn passed on to Midas minus a small deduction for an insurance payment.

- [90] As a result, it is undisputed that $2,704,463.18 went to pay obligations that were of direct benefit to Midas because the payment preserved Midas's assets. The balance of those funds was paid into a Midas bank account. That too, presumably, was to the benefit of Midas. The funds paid to Midas were disbursed to various third parties (including Mr. Rossi) and unidentified bank accounts. If funds were dispersed improperly from the Midas bank account by Mr. Kavanagh or others, the fraud or lack of authorization lies not in the mortgage but in the misuse of funds generated by the mortgage. That is not something for which the defendants, other than potentially Mr. Kavanagh, are responsible.

f. The Vroon Loan

- [91] As noted approximately $1,500,000 of the $5,000,000 mortgage was used to pay a debt of €1,000,000 owing to Peter Vroon. I take a moment to digress from the chronological narrative to discuss the Vroon loan because it provides additional reason for doubting Mr. Farrell's reliability as a witness.
- [92] Mr. Farrell's evidence on the Vroon loan is full of contradictions. During his examination for discovery Mr. Farrell testified that Mr. Vroon had in fact advanced the funds to Mr. Farrell so that Mr. Farrell could invest them on behalf of Mr. Vroon. During the same discovery Mr. Farrell stated that he had authorized Mr. Kavanagh to enter into the arrangement with Mr. Vroon. At trial Mr. Farrell denied this and said that the answer about Mr. Kavanagh being authorized to enter into arrangements with Mr. Vroon was not correct.
- [93] At trial Mr. Farrell tried to describe the loan as being for the benefit of Mr. Kavanagh because the loan proceeds were to be the funds that Mr. Kavanagh was using to "buy into Midas". However at the same time he admitted that €$650,000 of the Vroon funds were used to pay the legal fees of AIB. The remaining €350,000 went to Mr. Farrell personally. None of the money went to Mr. Kavanagh or to Midas. Later in his evidence, Mr. Farrell described the Vroon loan as an investment in Mr. Farrell's Irish properties or as "an investment in Thomas Farrell".
- [94] The terms of the loan are embodied in a loan agreement dated March 16, 2009. It appears to bear signatures of Mr. Kavanagh and Mr. Farrell. Despite the fact that Mr. Farrell described the loan as an investment in himself, he denies that it is his signature on the document. He claims never to have seen the loan agreement. I do not accept this. Mr. Vroon sent the loan agreement to Mr. Farrell's Irish lawyer, Mr. Breheny, to be signed by Mr. Breheny's clients. Mr. Vroon delivered the loan proceeds to Mr. Breheny's trust account. In addition, paragraph nine of the loan agreement refers to a letter dated March 13, 2009 from Mr. Breheny to Mr. Vroon. According to paragraph nine of the loan agreement, the letter provides:

Dear Mr. Vroon,

In consideration of the transfer to my client account of an amount of € 1,000,000 I have been directed by my clients and its directors to confirm that I hold to your order certain title documents to the Company's property 205, Yonge St. in Toronto. The title documents I hold are specifically a transfer of that property into the name of my client. I confirm and undertake that I will hold the Deed of Transfer in trust for you and to your order, and I will deal with it only as directed by you. If you have any further queries in this regard please do not hesitate to contact me.

Yours sincerely,

Neil J. Breheny

- [95] In his evidence, Mr. Farrell took the position that Mr. Breheny had sent a forged loan agreement to Mr. Vroon and was taking instructions from Mr. Kavanagh in this regard.
- [96] While it is possible for a lawyer to be involved with forged documents and to send documents with a client's forged signature against his client's wishes, I do not accept Mr. Farrell's evidence in this regard. Mr. Farrell has never complained about Mr. Breheny's conduct to the Irish legal regulator, has never brought any lawsuit against Mr. Breheny and does not even appear to have complained to Mr. Breheny personally.
- [97] On March 10, 2010, Mr. Vroon wrote to Mr. Breheny to confirm that he was still holding title documents to the Yonge Street property because the borrowers had not repaid the loan. Mr. Farrell claims that Mr. Breheny never brought this to his attention.
- [57] Mr. Vroon testified that he believed Mr. Kavanagh was authorized to deal on behalf of Midas. No one ever brought to Mr. Vroon's attention any limitations on Mr. Kavanagh's ability to act for Midas. Although $1,500,000 was transferred from the Midas account to Mr. Vroon on March 10, 2013 to pay the principal owing on the loan, Mr. Vroon testified that no interest was ever paid despite Mr. Vroon sending regular invoices for interest.

g. Events after Registration of the Second Mortgage

- [98] I now resume the chronological narrative.
- [99] On March 6, 2013 Mr. Rossi advised Mr. Farrell that AIB's lawyers would not engage with Mr. Rossi.
- [100] On March 8, 2013 Mr. Farrell replied telling Mr. Rossi to ask AIB what the full amount of the debt was but then tell AIB that if the full debt were paid, Mr. Rossi did not think he would be able to get a release from Mr. Farrell in favour of the bank. Mr. Farrell's next instruction was telling:

We will have to then wait and see the reaction of AIB but just in case Peter that they call our bluff can you confirm to me that the said funds are available to then be paid over to AIB. Perhaps yourself and John Kavanagh could put your heads together and make sure that this can happen but Peter I cannot stress to you enough that AIB has the strongest hand at the minute and it is getting stronger by the day and by the week and indeed the month (emphasis added).

Mr. Farrell concluded the email by asking Mr. Rossi to call Mr. Breheny.

- [101] On March 5, 2013 Mr. Rossi wrote to the lawyers for AIB threatening them with a complaint to the Law Society of Ireland and to the Financial Services Ombudsman if they did not respond to him. He followed up again on March 14, 2013 when no response had been received. Mr. Rossi sent copies of both emails to Mr. Farrell who responded to Mr. Rossi on March 14 noting:

... If this does not put a move on them Peter<sup>1</sup> you will have to make the next email to them harsher letting them know you mean business.

Peter, I just need the matter out of the way.

- [102] Mr. Farrell followed up with a further email to Mr. Rossi on March 26, 2013 stating, among other things:

Could you now please speak with John Kavanagh and revert back to me as soon as possible as seriously Peter, time is of the essence.

- [103] Mr. Farrell was in Toronto between April 5, 2013 and June 14, 2013.

- [104] In early April 2013, Esso was taking steps to have Mr. Farrell assigned into bankruptcy. On April 7, 2013 Jackie Farrell, on Mr. Farrell's instructions, sent Mr. Kavanagh payment details for Esso's lawyers in Ireland. On April 12, 2013 Mr. Kavanagh arranged for a transfer of funds to pay off the Esso debt. Mr. Farrell says he has no idea where the funds came from. At the same time, however, Mr. Farrell asserts that he had plenty of money to pay Esso and AIB. Mr. Farrell's evidence in this regard is inconsistent with his contemporaneous emails to Mr. Rossi urging him to resolve the situation with AIB and put his head together with Mr. Kavanagh to make that happen.

<sup>1</sup> It was explained at trial that Mr. Farrell referred to Mr. Rossi as Peter because Mr. Farrell did not like the name Walter.

- [105] The only evidence before me of any funds to pay the Esso judgment were the proceeds from the $5 million mortgage on the Yonge Street and Eastern Avenue properties.
- [106] By June 20, 2013, Mr. Farrell says he became aware of the $5,000,000 mortgage and had Mr. Breheny write to the lawyer for the mortgagees, Kimberly Gabriel to investigate.
- [107] On June 24, Mr. Breheny wrote to Colina King advising her of the alleged fraud. In Mr. Breheny's letter he specifically refers to Mr. Farrell being the 50% shareholder, President and a Director of Midas. Ms. King replied on July 16, 2013 referring to a Form 1 which demonstrated that Mr. Farrell was not the president or a director of Midas.
- [108] I contrast this correspondence with Mr. Farrell's evidence. He testified that at one point he visited Ms. King in her office on Warden Avenue. According to Mr. Farrell, after he introduced himself Ms. King responded "goodness goodness you are supposed to be dead." Ms. King denies ever making such a statement and says that "goodness goodness" is not an expression she would use. I prefer Ms. King's evidence over Mr. Farrell's.
- [109] It is unclear from Mr. Farrell's evidence whether Ms. King's alleged statement about Mr. Farrell being dead arose before or after Mr. Breheny's letter of June 24. In either scenario, the statement makes little sense in light of contemporaneous documents.
- [110] If I assume that Mr. Farrell visited Ms. King after she received Mr. Breheny's letter of June 24, it is unlikely that Ms. King would have been taken by surprise and said words to the effect of "Goodness, goodness you are supposed to be dead" because she would already have learned of Mr. Farrell's existence from Mr. Breheny's letter. Had Ms. King in fact believed that Mr. Farrell was dead, one might expect her to have explained this in her reply to Mr. Breheny of July 13, 2013.
- [111] If I assume Mr. Farrell's visit to Ms. King occurred before Mr. Breheny's letter of June 24, it is odd that Mr. Breheny would not have referred to that meeting in the letter. One would expect Mr. Farrell to have told his lawyer about the statement because it would only strengthen the allegation that there had been a fraudulent transaction. That would be relevant for Mr. Breheny to know and would be a relevant factor for him to include in his letter to Ms. King.
- [112] When Mr. Farrell says he learned of the mortgage, he made no effort to contact Mr. Kavanagh. The mortgage was fraudulent as Mr. Farrell claims, one might have thought that Mr. Kavanagh would be the first person Mr. Farrell would contact to, at the very least, ask questions. Mr. Farrell says he contacted Mr. Kavanagh at some later point by telephone but could not recall the details of the conversation. Later in his evidence Mr. Farrell asserted that Mr. Kavanagh said during the conversation that things were not as they seemed and that he did not do what Mr. Farrell thought he had done.
- [113] Although Mr. Farrell maintains that Mr. Kavanagh has defrauded him, he has raised no complaint against Mr. Kavanagh in Ireland and has not, for example, even made a complaint against him to Irish accounting authorities.

h. Farrell and Rossi Dealings After “Discovering the Fraud”

- [114] After Mr. Farrell says he discovered the “fraudulent” mortgage, he continued to deal with Mr. Rossi in connection with the AIB debt.
- [115] By September 2013 AIB was taking steps to enforce its security by selling the properties at issue. At that point, Mr. Rossi, at Mr. Farrell’s direction, began pretending that he was interested in purchasing the property. Mr. Farrell sent Mr. Rossi details of the property listing and, at Mr. Rossi’s request sent him contact information for a lawyer that Mr. Rossi could use who was in no way connected with Mr. Farrell.
- [116] Even though Mr. Farrell continued to deal with Mr. Rossi after “discovering” the alleged fraud, Mr. Farrell says he did not speak with Mr. Rossi about the allegedly fraudulent mortgage
- [117] That is striking.
- [118] The email traffic between Mr. Farrell and Mr. Rossi makes it clear that Mr. Farrell was looking to Mr. Rossi for help and advice with problems. The emails also make it clear that Mr. Farrell had been encouraging Mr. Rossi to work with Mr. Kavanagh. It staggers belief that, if Mr. Farrell had been defrauded of $5,000,000 by the person he had told Mr. Rossi to deal with, he would not even tell Mr. Rossi to stop dealing with Mr. Kavanagh.
- [119] Mr. Farrell has no explanation for the absence of such communications.
- [120] Stranger still is that Mr. Farrell had no conversations with Mr. Rossi about Mr. Kavanagh even though Mr. Farrell came to learn that Mr. Rossi’s credit card had been used to pay for the Form 1 that was part of the allegedly fraudulent scheme. One might have expected a question as simple as: “Why were you paying for this?” or “What did you think you are paying for?”
- [121] Even more strange is that Mr. Rossi received over $400,000 from the allegedly fraudulent mortgage proceeds yet Mr. Farrell has made no effort to recover that money from Mr. Rossi even though Mr. Farrell sued the mortgagees, the lawyer acting for Midas, the property valuator and the potential tenant associated with the Yonge Street property.
- [122] The final component of strangeness concerns Mr. Rossi’s efforts on Mr. Farrell’s behalf with AIB and Esso. As noted earlier, the plan was to have Mr. Rossi purchase the debt at a discount. Mr. Rossi was pretending to be a representative of a fund that engaged in those sorts of purchases. There is no evidence anywhere of Mr. Rossi’s actual ability to pay AIB or Esso. Mr. Farrell agreed that he would have to come to an understanding with whoever bought the debt about how much Mr. Farrell would have to repay the purchaser and on what terms. Even though Mr. Farrell was pressing Mr. Rossi to wrap things up quickly to the point of threatening AIB with complaints to the Law Society and the Financial Services Ombudsman, there is no evidence that Mr. Farrell ever discussed terms of repayment with Mr. Rossi, let alone came to an agreement about the terms of repayment.

- [123] The only inference I can arrive at is that Mr. Farrell never discussed terms with Mr. Rossi because Mr. Rossi was never going to pay for the debt with his own funds. Had the plan succeeded, Mr. Farrell would have used funds from the mortgages or other funds that Mr. Farrell had to pay AIB, just as he had apparently used mortgage funds to repay Esso.
- [124] The only conclusion I can come to from these circumstances is that Mr. Farrell was aware of and consented to the plan to remove him as a shareholder and director of Midas to protect his Canadian assets from his creditors; that he was aware of the mortgages as they were being registered, that Mr. Kavanagh had authority to bind Midas to the Mortgage; that there was no fraud on Midas; and that the mortgage is valid. Mr. Farrell's allegations that the mortgages are fraudulent certainly fits the pattern of Mr. Farrell accepting credit but then taking aggressive steps to avoid payment on the debt with a view at some point of negotiating a heavy discount on it.
- [125] Even if my inferences and conclusions about the degree of Mr. Farrell's knowledge are incorrect, the evidence demonstrates on a balance of probabilities that Mr. Kavanagh had authority to conclude the mortgages and that the plaintiffs received substantial benefit from the mortgages.

III. The Rule in Browne v. Dunn

- [126] The plaintiffs submit that the defendants cannot challenge Mr. Farrell's narrative about the mortgages because they did not put a contrary version of events to him during cross-examination nor did they put to him that he knew about and was involved in the mortgages.
- [127] The defendants were, however, under no obligation to do so.
- [128] The principle underlying what has become known as the Rule in Browne v. Dunn is trial fairness. The point is to ensure that a witness is somehow aware that their story is being challenged. The Court of Appeal described the principle as follows in R. v. Quansah, 2015 ONCA 237:

[81] Compliance with the rule in Browne v. Dunn does not require that every scrap of evidence on which a party desires to contradict the witness for the opposite party be put to that witness in cross-examination. The cross-examination should confront the witness with matters of substance on which the party seeks to impeach the witness's credibility and on which the witness has not had an opportunity of giving an explanation because there has been no suggestion whatever that the witness's story is not accepted.

[82] In some cases, it may be apparent from the tenor of counsel's cross-examination of a witness that the cross-examining party does not accept the witness's version of events. Where the confrontation is general, known to the witness and the witness's view on the contradictory matter is apparent, there is no need for confrontation and no unfairness to the witness in any failure to do so.

[86] The confrontation principle is not violated where it is clear, in all the circumstances, that the cross-examiner intends to impeach the witness's story. ... (Citations omitted, emphasis added)

[129] Paragraph 81 of Quansah makes clear that the witness must be confronted only on those issues on which the party seeks to impeach the witness's credibility and which the witness has not had a chance to explain because there has been no suggestion that the witness's story is not accepted.

[130] The statements of defence made clear that the defendants alleged that the plaintiffs received the benefit of the mortgages and were seeking to set aside the mortgage Mr. Farrell placed on the property as a fraudulent conveyance.

[131] The defendants' written opening statements, which were exchanged five days before the trial began, could leave no doubt that Mr. Farrell's credibility was in issue. By way of example, Ms. King's opening statement says the following with respect to Mr. Farrell's claim that he had no notice of Mr. Kavanagh's dealings with the properties and that the plaintiffs received no benefit from those dealings:

King submits that Farrell's narrative, unlikely on its face, is rendered untenable by the productions of the defendants... (p. 1)

However, [the plaintiffs] have produced nothing to substantiate this beyond the word of Mr. Farrell, whose version of events contains a series of irreconcilable contradictions (p. 4)

... Farrell's own version of events is fantastical. Even if Farrell's narrative were credible on its face, it is fatally undermined by the evidence uncovered by the defendants (none of which was volunteered by the Plaintiffs). (p. 5)

These denials are, like so much of Farrell's testimony, incredible. (p. 7)

[132] This should have made it abundantly clear that Mr. Farrell's narrative was being challenged.

[133] Moreover, it is not necessary to confront a witness in a hostile manner to challenge credibility. It is sufficient to put to the witness facts that are inconsistent with his own narrative. In the case of Mr. Farrell it was up to his lawyer to decide whether he wanted to try to have Mr. Farrell explain those juxtaposed facts in re-examination.

IV. The Claim Against Mr. Kavanagh

[134] Mr. Farrell seeks an order vesting Mr. Kavanagh's shares in Mr. Farrell. The mortgagees oppose that relief. They obtained a guarantee from Mr. Kavanagh. The only material asset of Mr. Kavanagh's that the mortgagees know of is his interest in Midas.

[135] The plaintiffs base their claim to Mr. Kavanagh's shares on two core submissions. First, that Mr. Kavanagh did not pay the subscription price for his shares and second, that the issuance of shares to Mr. Kavanagh was subject to conditions that Mr. Kavanagh did not meet. Neither of these grounds, in my view, constitutes a basis for vesting Mr. Kavanagh's shares in Mr. Farrell.

a. Alleged Failure to Pay for the Shares

[136] Midas' share capital consists of 100 common shares at a subscription price of one dollar each. Each of Mr. Farrell and Mr. Kavanagh were issued 50 shares. Mr. Farrell submits that Mr. Kavanagh never paid the $50 for his shares. Mr. Farrell submits that the effect of Mr. Kavanagh's failure to pay is that his shares are somehow a nullity or should be transferred to Mr. Farrell. He relies on section 23 (3) of the OBCA in support of this submission.

[137] Section 23 (3) of the OBCA provides:

“a share shall not be issued until the consideration for the share is fully paid in money or in property or past service that is not less in value than the fair equivalent of the money that the corporation would have received if the share had been issued for money.”

[138] The Plaintiffs rely on Dunham v. Apollo Tours Ltd. (1978) 20 O.R. (2d) 9 at paras. 20-24 which held that a shareholder who did not pay for shares in similar circumstances could be deprived of the shares.

[139] The only evidence before me that Mr. Kavanagh did not pay the $50 is the assertion of Mr. Farrell. As noted earlier, I find Mr. Farrell to be an entirely unreliable witness. The mortgagees took a guarantee from Mr. Kavanagh based on the understanding that he held shares in Midas. I am not prepared to deprive the mortgagees of the benefit of the guarantee based on a bald assertion by Mr. Farrell to the effect that Mr. Kavanagh did not pay $50 fourteen years ago as he should have.

- [140] The approach I am taking here is also consistent with that of the Supreme Court of Canada in Mennillo v. Intramodal Inc., 2016 SCC 51, at paragraph 22, where the shareholders' failure to pay for their shares contrary to s. 25(3) CBCA<sup>2</sup> did not affect their status as shareholders.
- [141] It would seem additionally unfair to vest Mr. Kavanagh's shares in Mr. Farrell given that the minute book for the company went missing after Loopstra Nixon send it to Mr. Rudensky. The plaintiffs have not called Mr. Rudensky as a witness to explain what happened with the minute book. The minute book may well shed light on whether and how Mr. Kavanagh paid for his shares.
- [142] If I am wrong in my analysis, I note that in Dunham, the shareholder who had not paid for his shares was given a certain period of time to do so. If I am wrong in my analysis of the evidence and Mr. Kavanagh's share should be paid for, I would grant leave to the mortgagees to pay $50 to Midas in full payment of Mr. Kavanagh's shares.

b. Alleged Conditions Relating to Mr. Kavanagh's Shares

- [143] In addition to the allegation that Mr. Kavanagh did not pay the $50 subscription price for his shares, Mr. Farrell alleges that there were other conditions associated with the share issuance to Mr. Kavanagh which were never fulfilled.
- [144] Mr. Farrell's evidence in this regard is contradictory. At times, Mr. Farrell spoke of a requirement by Mr. Kavanagh to contribute 50% of the value of the properties in cash.
- [145] At other times Mr. Farrell spoke of the deal being that Mr. Kavanagh would have his contribution valued based on work he did for Midas over and above the usual week's work for which he was paid.
- [146] Neither arrangement is anywhere in writing. There is no formal agreement, no email, not even a handwritten note. The method by which Mr. Kavanagh's work above his "usual work week" was to be calculated was never determined nor was the time by which Mr. Kavanagh was required to contribute cash or services for his 50%. Nor was the total value of the amount that Mr. Kavanagh would have to "work off" ever determined. In those circumstances, the agreement Mr. Farrell describes is too vague to be enforceable.
- [147] In support of his argument, Mr. Farrell further relies on to Kavanagh's deemed admissions to paragraphs 20, 21, 24, 36, 38, 54 and 55 of the statement of claim which set out his arrangement with Mr. Kavanagh. These paragraphs do not constitute an enforceable agreement.
- [148] The allegations about the obligation to make a cash investment are found in paragraph 20 of the statement of claim. It speaks of "a later financial investment from Kavanagh in an amount to be subsequently agreed upon.” That is nothing but an agreement to agree which is not enforceable.

- [149] The gist of the remaining paragraphs is that it was a condition of the share issuance that Mr. Farrell would “devote whatever time was needed to fully and properly manage, oversee and look after the affairs of [Midas] in accordance with Farrell’s directions and instructions.”
- [150] There is no evidence that any such condition was noted on the share certificates, in the minute book of the Corporation or was otherwise brought to the attention of others who may rely on the fact that shares were issued to Mr. Kavanagh. I note that Midas’s tax returns from early on show both Mr. Farrell and Mr. Kavanagh as 50% shareholders without further qualification. The first time that appears to have been changed is in the 2017 tax return.
- [151] Finally, although section 23 (3) of the OBCA contemplates past services as amounting to consideration for the issuance of shares, it does not contemplate future services as amounting to consideration for the issuance of shares. Indeed, on the very wording of section 23 (3) it would appear that future services are precluded as consideration for share issuances because, by definition, they could not be fully paid for before the shares are issued.
- [152] For all of these reasons, I do not accept Mr. Farrell’s evidence of any agreement that imposes any sort of condition on the shares of Mr. Kavanagh. I therefore dismiss the plaintiffs’ claim for a declaration that Mr. Kavanagh is not entitled to any shares in Midas.

c. Damages Claim against Mr. Kavanagh

- [153] The plaintiffs claim damages from Mr. Kavanagh in the event that the $5,000,000 mortgage is declared enforceable. They claim damages of $3,892,947.47 plus interest. They say that this is the difference between the $4.8 million advanced on the mortgage and a sum of $907,052.53 which has been repaid. Midas also seeks recovery from Mr. Kavanagh of all costs and legal fees in the proceedings with the mortgagee defendants.
- [154] I decline to award any judgment in the plaintiffs’ favour.
- [155] The fact that a defendant has been noted in default does not entitle a plaintiff to judgment. Rule 19.02 (1) (a) provides that a defendant who has been noted in default:
- is deemed to admit the truth of all allegations of fact made in the statement of claim.
- [156] The statement of claim does not make any allegations of fact on which to base the monetary judgment the plaintiffs seek. The claims against Mr. Kavanagh are set out in paragraphs 50 – 58 of the statement of claim. Those paragraphs do not contain allegations of fact.

Instead they make broad legal allegations about Mr. Kavanagh's conduct. These include allegations to the effect that he "fraudulently and unlawfully" arranged for the mortgages, that he "misappropriated and stole" the proceeds of the mortgage, that he "fraudulently and unlawfully" caused Mr. Farrell to be removed as a director.

- [157] To the extent there are factual allegations in those paragraphs, they relate to the registration of a mortgage, spending the proceeds of the mortgage and removing Mr. Farrell as a director. Those facts alone do not support a monetary judgment. The overlay on those facts that might support a judgment are the allegations of fraud, misappropriation and theft. As pleaded, those are legal characterizations, not facts. As noted earlier in these reasons I have not accepted the legal characterizations of fraud, misappropriation or theft.
- [158] Moreover, the judgment the plaintiffs seek would be based on deemed admissions to the allegations in the statement of claim based on Mr. Kavanagh's failure to defend. The effect of any such judgment would be to diminish the force of any judgment that the mortgagees would have against Mr. Kavanagh based on the guarantee.
- [159] Although Mr. Kavanagh has been noted in default and is therefore deemed to admit the facts alleged against him in the statement of claim, those admissions do not bind other defendants: Correia v. Canac Kitchens, 2008 ONCA 506 at para 110. Using deemed admissions against Mr. Kavanagh to diminish the value of the mortgagees' judgment on Mr. Kavanagh's guarantee would not be appropriate given my earlier findings about the mortgages, the circumstances in which they were entered into and the use of their proceeds.
- [160] To my mind, granting a default judgment against Mr. Kavanagh would be granting a judgment based on deemed admissions which judgment and deemed admissions go directly contrary to the evidence I heard and the findings of fact I have made. That would not be in the interest of justice.
- [161] The mortgagees have advanced a cross-claim against Mr. Kavanagh on his guarantee. The cross-claim asserts the fact of the guarantee, the fact that the mortgage it guarantees is in default and that the default triggers the guarantee. Those facts were established at trial and entitle the mortgagees to judgment. To the extent that the mortgagees recover on the property itself, there can of course be no double recovery against Mr. Kavanagh.

V. The Claim Against Colina King

- [162] The plaintiffs submit that Colina King, the lawyer Mr. Kavanagh retained on the mortgage transactions fell short of the standard of care required of a reasonably prudent lawyer in a real estate transaction. The plaintiffs argue that had Ms. King met the standard of care, irregularities would have been noticed and the nature of the fraud exposed.
- [163] As noted above, I have found that there was no fraud. Strictly speaking it is therefore not necessary to address the negligence allegations against Ms. King. I will nevertheless do so briefly in the event I am wrong on the issue of fraud.

- [164] The negligence allegations against Ms. King have to be viewed in proper context. She was retained in October for mortgages that were not registered until December and March. There was therefore no particular urgency in the registration of the mortgages. Urgency is a red flag for fraud. She was also retained by a long-standing officer of the corporation. That too is a source of some level of comfort. Finally, all of the funds on the mortgages appear to have been directed to legitimate payees. They were used to pay off tax arrears, construction liens, prepaid interest, prepaid taxes with the balance being paid to Midas. A further common red flag for fraud is payment to parties with no legitimate relationship to the mortgagor. That is not present here.
- [165] The plaintiffs argue that Ms. King was negligent in accepting By-Law Number two, the borrowing by-law. The alleged negligence lies in the fact that the by-law is signed by Mr. Farrell as President and by Mr. Kavanagh as Secretary beneath a line that indicates that the by-law was enacted by the board. Mr. Kavanagh was not a board member at the time. In addition, the by-law is one of Midas and is dated December 15, 2006. As of that date the Corporation's name was 2122161 Ontario Limited. While there was a corporate resolution changing the name to Midas, it was dated the same day as the company was incorporated.
- [166] The plaintiffs' expert, Robert Aaron, was of the view that this amounted to negligence. Ms. King's expert, Hartley Nathan was of the opinion that this did not amount to negligence and that the irregularities were such that a reasonable solicitor may not have noticed or may have chosen to ignore them. Mr. Aaron admitted that the irregularities in By-Law Number two did not rise to the level of a red flag but were evidence of sloppiness. On re-examination Mr. Aaron expressed the view that the irregularities in By-Law Number two were red flags.
- [167] In the context of the by-law as a whole, the irregularities do not constitute red flags that ought to have put Ms. King on notice of any wrongdoing. As noted earlier, the by-law was not even necessary because the corporation already had the power to borrow. Moreover, the by-law was expressly affirmed by Mr. Farrell and Mr. Kavanagh signing as shareholders thereby assuaging any concerns that the by-law may not have been properly passed.
- [168] Although Ms. King purports to have seen a copy of the corporate minute book, she made no copy of it and has no correspondence to demonstrate its chain of possession. The corporate minute book has now disappeared. While it would have been helpful for Ms. King to make a copy of the minute book or to prepare cover letters that showed a chain of possession, no one articulated any theory about how her failure to do so caused the mortgages to be registered. Had she kept a copy of the minute book or had covering letters the mortgages would still have been registered. The defendants try to avoid the causation argument by suggesting that Ms. King never actually saw the minute book. She says she did, that it was her practice to view minute books and that she would not have proceeded with the transaction without having seen the minute book. I have no reason to disbelieve her. I have even less reason to disbelieve her given that the last trail of possession for the minute book was its transfer from Loopstra .Nixon to Mr. Farrell's accountant, Mr. Rudensky, whom Mr. Farrell did not call as a witness.

- [169] The plaintiffs also allege that Ms. King was negligent in respect of the certificate of incumbency that she delivered to the mortgagees. The certificate confirmed that Mr. Kavanagh and Mr. Papastamos were directors. The plaintiffs argue that Ms. King cannot demonstrate she met the standard of care in identifying the directors because she cannot produce the minute book that would contain resolutions appointing them. This goes back to the issue of the minute book which I have already addressed above.
- [170] The plaintiffs further allege that Ms. King did not keep adequate records of her meeting with Mr. Papastamos. They allege she never met with him. Ms. King says she met an elderly Greek man who identified himself as Alex Papastamos, took copies of his identification, and reviewed the Certificate of Incumbency with him.
- [171] Mr. Papastamos died before trial. He had, however, been examined under rule 39 . The transcript of that examination was admitted into evidence at trial. During that examination he denied having met Ms. King. He was asked whether the signature on the certificate of incumbency was his. He responded:
- No, it is not my signature. It's close enough... copied.
- [172] Mr. Papastamos denied having signed the document but said that he had given Mr. Kavanagh a copy of his passport and driver's license because Mr. Kavanagh needed a Canadian resident director for an unidentified business on Yonge Street. That sounds like it could relate to the Yonge Street property. He also testified to the effect that his relationship with Mr. Kavanagh was very good, he was not aware that he had been removed as a director of Midas, he was a director of Midas solely because it needed a resident Canadian director and that he was not involved in the business of Midas.
- [173] The evidence of Mr. Papastamos is troubling. However even if I prefer his evidence over that of Ms. King, there are significant causation issues in respect of which the plaintiffs have not satisfied me.
- [174] The plaintiffs' theory is that Ms. King never met Mr. Papastamos but merely accepted photocopied ID that she received from Mr. Kavanagh. If I accept that as true, I must still determine whether that act of negligence caused the mortgages to be registered.
- [175] The British Columbia Court of Appeal's decision in BSA Investors Ltd v. Mosly, 2007 BCCA 94 is apposite in this regard. In that case, an agent of the plaintiff fraudulently registered a mortgage and took the proceeds for himself. The trial judge found the lawyer of the corporate plaintiff to have been negligent because he did not notice that its articles of incorporation required two signatures for debt instruments. The Court of Appeal overruled the trial judge on the basis that his causation analysis was faulty:

48. The question might therefore be asked: was it really a part of the plaintiffs' burden of proof to show that had Mr. Lester asked for the second signature it would have put a stop to Mr. Mosly's fraud. In my view, on these facts, the answer is yes. Obviously, the plaintiffs were not required to lead evidence negating every possible hypothetical situation. But here there was a sizeable body of evidence going to Mr. Mosly's dishonesty, which was accepted by the trial judge and summarized at paras. 57 to 72 of his reasons. Consequently, the plaintiffs' burden as to causation included the requirement to show, on a balance of probabilities, that had Mr. Lester performed his duty Mr. Mosly would have been stopped.

[176] Had Ms. King insisted on meeting Mr. Papastamos in person, one of two things would likely have occurred. Mr. Kavanagh could have made arrangements for Mr. Papastamos to attend Ms. King's office and sign the certificate of incumbency in person. Mr. Papastamos was not aware that he had ever been removed as a director so it would have come as no surprise to him to be required to sign a document indicating that he was a director. Mr. Papastamos also described his relationship with Mr. Kavanagh as being very good. In that context he would probably have attended in person had it been made convenient for him. Alternatively, Mr. Kavanagh could have found someone else to act as the resident director. Given the sophisticated and detailed nature of the fraud that the plaintiffs allege against Mr. Kavanagh, it is unlikely that he would have been stopped by the mere requirement to have someone attend at Ms. King's office in person in the capacity of a resident Canadian director.

[177] The plaintiffs also allege that Ms. King was negligent in having improper and ineffective resolutions signed approving the mortgages. The resolutions were prepared by Ms. Gabriel and sent to Ms. King for signature. The defect in the resolutions is that all of their dispositive paragraphs begin with the words "and whereas;" wording typically associated with recitals. While the error may lead to inelegant drafting, it does not affect the dispositive effect of the paragraphs in question. The actual language of those paragraphs remains dispositive in nature despite the two opening words. For example, the third paragraph reads:

AND WHEREAS the terms of the above-mentioned Letter are hereby ratified and confirmed and the Corporation is authorized to comply in full with its terms, and to provide all security documentation is required, to be executed as shown thereon.

[178] While it is no doubt preferable that the dispositive language of this paragraph be found under a heading of something like "be it resolved that" or in a paragraph that begins with those words as opposed to beginning with the words "and whereas", the imperfect wording does not change the dispositive force of the paragraph.

[179] Regardless of its first two words, the language clearly evidences the ratification of the terms of the Letter referred to and affirms the corporation's authorization to comply with the Letter and provide security documentation as required. The language of the fourth and fifth paragraphs of the resolutions is to similar effect.

- [180] This issue also raises causation questions. Had Ms. King noticed the error, she would presumably have phoned Ms. Gabriel who would have provided more carefully drafted resolutions. It would not have prevented the mortgages from being registered.
- [181] Finally, Ms. King received a new Form 1. The original Form 1 had Mr. Farrell and Mr. Papastamos as directors. It was replaced by a Form 1 that listed only Mr. Kavanagh as a director. Shortly before the first mortgage was registered, Ms. King received a revised Form 1 which reinstated Mr. Papastamos as a director in addition to Mr. Kavanagh. This was the Form 1 in respect of which Mr. Rossi had written Ms. King advising that Mr. Kavanagh had received a notice from the ministry to the effect that they were “going to kill the company because of the lack of Canadian director.”
- [182] That was a reasonable explanation. The reinstatement of Mr. Papastamos was consistent with the requirements to have a Canadian resident director. It was reinstating an earlier, long-standing director and would not raise any particular concerns.
- [183] For these reasons I find that a claim of negligence against Ms. King has not been made out.

VI. The Claim Against the Mortgagees

- [184] The plaintiffs claim that the mortgagees had sufficient knowledge of the alleged fraud that prevents them from relying on the mortgage. I disagree. The plaintiffs claim against the mortgagees runs into three significant legal hurdles.
- [185] The first legal hurdle is the indoor management rule embodied in ss. 19 (a) (b) and (d) of the OBCA which provides:
19. A corporation or a guarantor of an obligation of a corporation may not assert against a person dealing with the corporation or with any person who has acquired rights from the corporation that,
    - (a) the articles, by-laws or any unanimous shareholder agreement have not been complied with;
    - (b) the persons named in the most recent notice filed under the Corporations Information Act, or named in the articles, whichever is more current, are not the directors of the corporation;
    - (d) a person held out by a corporation as a director, an officer or an agent of the corporation has not been duly appointed or does not have authority to exercise the powers and perform the duties that are customary in the business of the corporation or usual for such director, officer or agent;

except where the person has or ought to have, by virtue of the person's position with or relationship to the corporation, knowledge to that effect.

- [186] The effect of the plaintiff's claim against the mortgagees is to argue that Mr. Kavanagh, an individual named as an officer and a director in a Form 1 (the notice filed under the Corporations Information Act) and a person held out by Midas as an officer with the authority to bind the corporation (by virtue of By-Law Number one ) did not in fact have that authority.
- [187] The only way the plaintiffs can take that position successfully is to demonstrate that the mortgagees knew or ought to have known that Mr. Kavanagh had no such power by virtue of the mortgagees relationship with Midas. They have not done so.
- [188] The second legal hurdle is the Land Titles Act, R.S.O. 1990, c.L5. The basic scheme of that act is to say that registered instruments are valid, end of story. That principle is embodied in s. 78 (4) of the Act which provides:

Effect of registration

(4) When registered, an instrument shall be deemed to be embodied in the register and to be effective according to its nature and intent, and to create, transfer, charge or discharge, as the case requires, the land or estate or interest therein mentioned in the register.

- [189] There are two limited exceptions to this principle. One is statutory, the other is based in case law. The statutory exception relates to certain types of fraud. The thrust of that exception is to capture instances where a party fraudulently impersonates the titleholder of property and, by doing so, fraudulently conveys an interest in property to themselves. The Land Titles Act contains limited exceptions to guard against that mischief. The plaintiffs agree that they do not fall into that exception because there was no fraudulent impersonation here. Mr. Kavanagh at all times purported to be who he actually was and was exercising the authority he had by virtue of the corporate by-laws.
- [190] The exception rooted in case law holds that the protection of section 78 (4) only applies to bona fide registrants for value, that is to say registrants who do not have notice of an interest in land that differs from that shown in the register.
- [191] The Ontario Court of Appeal set out what this means in Stanbarr Services Limited v. Metropolis Properties Inc. 2018 ONCA 244. In doing so the court made clear that in order to prevent someone from relying on a registered interest, one must demonstrate that the party had actual knowledge of an interest in land that differs from what is shown in the register. The Court of Appeal made this clear in paragraph 26 and 28:

[26] Because notice has been considered to be one of a limited number of exceptions to the mirror principle, it has been strictly construed. Our courts insist on actual notice of a defect. Actual knowledge means just that; the party must actually know about the defect. It is not sufficient that it has become aware of facts that may suggest it should make inquiries: Rose v. Peterkin (1885), 1885 CanLII 16 (SCC), 13 S.C.R. 677, at pp. 694-695. Constructive knowledge is insufficient. Thus, the factual analysis in considering a notice argument is limited to a consideration of what the party knew, not what it could have known had it made inquiries.

[28] ... it is unnecessary and unhelpful to consider whether they received sufficient information to put them on inquiry. That is because receipt of such information does not amount to actual knowledge: Rose, at pp. 694-695. Therefore, whether the party received such information and what steps it took to investigate the situation is wholly irrelevant to the actual knowledge analysis.

- [192] The plaintiffs have not demonstrated any actual knowledge on the part of the mortgagees. The best the plaintiffs can argue is that the mortgagees were aware of anomalies in by-laws, property appraisals or leases that should have led them to make further inquiries. This is clearly not enough and does not prevent the mortgagees from relying on their registration.
- [193] The third legal hurdle concerns the legal duties of mortgagees to mortgagors or, more precisely put, the absence of such legal duties. In Isaacs v. Royal Bank of Canada, 2010 ONSC 3527 at paras. 38-44, aff'd at 2011 ONCA 88 the court affirmed that the relationship between a mortgagee and a mortgagor is one of debtor and creditor. The mortgagee owes the mortgagor no duties to adhere to its own internal lending procedures. Any steps a mortgagee takes are to protect its own interests. It is free to do or not do as it wishes. As a result, any condition in the lending agreement with respect to things such as satisfactory leases or satisfactory appraisals exist solely for the protection of the mortgagee. The mortgagee can wave them at will and has no duty to fulfil those conditions to protect the mortgagor.
- [194] That is precisely the plaintiffs' claim against the mortgagees. The lending commitment was conditional on satisfactory appraisals and leases. The plaintiffs complain that there were anomalies in the appraisal and lease which should have led the mortgagees to make further inquiries and that such further inquiries would have disclosed the alleged fraud. Isaacs makes clear however that there is no duty on the mortgagee to enforce those conditions.
- [195] The mortgagees' principal witness was Gary Gruneir. He is the directing mind of the defendant C & K Mortgage Services Inc. operating as Rescom Capital. Mr. Gruneir struck me as an honest, candid, direct and reliable witness. He described his business as being that of an asset lender. That is to say he advances funds on his own assessment of the value of the asset, not on the basis of appraisals or income streams. What is critical for him is what he can generate from the property on a forced sale. This makes good sense given that his business tends to focus on lending that is more challenging than the sort of lending large banks might engage in.

[196] At the time these mortgages were extended, he had completed approximately 1000 mortgages and had been in business for approximately 30 years. As a result of that experience he had a good base on which to value properties quickly. In addition, he acted as a mortgage broker for a wide range of sophisticated clients. They also had extensive experience in real estate investment and were a further source of information about property values.

[197] The anomalies on which the plaintiffs rely are as follows:

- (a) Mr. Gruneir was sent an appraisal of the Yonge Street property only 12 pages of which dealt with the Yonge Street property while the remaining 26 pages dealt with a different property in a different neighbourhood. The plaintiffs argue that Mr. Gruneir should have noticed the discrepancy, called the appraiser and that, had he done so, the alleged fraud would have come to light.
- (b) Mr. Gruneir knew there was supposed to be a tenant going into the Yonge Street property and allegedly made no effort to contact the tenant and did not notice anomalies in the purported lease that would have led him to contact the purported tenant and would have disclosed the false nature of the lease.
- (c) Mr. received an estimate from Bautech Developments Limited for landlord work required on the Yonge Street property which the plaintiffs allege was forged. Mr. Gruneir did not follow up with Bautech. Had he done so, he would have learned of the forgery and the allegedly fraudulent mortgage would come to light.

[198] Mr. Gruneir testified that he probably viewed the appraisal on a computer. He knew of the property valuator in question and described him as a “no-fly zone appraiser” because his appraisals were unrealistically high and sloppily prepared. In this case the appraisal was based on a tenant generating $845,000 a year in income. Mr. Gruneir indicated that while a tenant might be icing on the cake, rental income does not figure prominently in his asset valuations. For his business, the distressed sale value was the critical driver. For the same reasons, Mr. Gruneir paid little attention to the lease.

[199] The plaintiffs also criticized Mr. Gruneir for not following up on the Bautech estimate for the installation of heating and air conditioning. The plaintiffs called Mr. Buttner, Bautech’s directing mind, as a witness. He said the estimate was a forgery and was not generated by his company. The plaintiff’s theory was that Mr. Gruneir should have followed up with Bautech to satisfy himself about the legitimacy and accuracy of the estimate. According to Mr. Gruneir, he had no basis for believing that the Bautech estimate was a forgery. I agree. There is nothing on the face of the document that would suggest that it was anything other than what it appeared to be.

[200] Moreover, tab 542 of Exhibit 1 is an email from Mr. Buttner to John Kavanagh attaching an estimate. This suggests that Mr. Buttner may have been mistaken when he concluded that the document he was shown during his examination in chief was a forgery. Even if the document Mr. Buttner was shown during his examination in chief contained irregularities visible to him, he had nevertheless provided Mr. Kavanagh with a legitimate estimate.

[201] The plaintiffs also allege that the mortgagees' lawyer, Kim Gabriel acted negligently because she failed to notice a number of discrepancies and anomalies in the documents she was given by Ms. King and that had she done so and made further inquiries, the alleged fraud would have been uncovered.

[202] According to the plaintiffs' expert, Mr. Robert Aaron, Ms. Gabriel, fell short of the standard of care in that she:

(a) Accepted without question Ms. King's solicitors opinion with respect to the borrower having taken all necessary steps to authorize the mortgage when the borrowing by-laws was apparently invalid.

(b) Failed to notice a number of red flags including:

- i. The proximity between the dates of corporate changes and the mortgages.
- ii. The urgency for completion of both mortgages, the documents.
- iii. The absence of any covering letter accompanying the documents that Ms. Gabriel received from Ms. King including the absence of a list of documents or an envelope indicating that the documentation came from Ms. King.
- iv. Failing to notice the irregularities with the borrowing by-law.
- v. Failing to notice the incomplete and inaccurate appraisal for the Yonge Street property.
- vi. The absence of any lawyer contact for the alleged tenant of the Yonge Street property. Ms. Gabriel merely accepted the lease on the Yonge Street property without verifying that it had been signed by an officer of the corporate tenant. The corporate tenant was incorporated only nine days after the purported lease was supposedly signed.

[203] Although Ms. Gabriel is not a defendant in the action, the plaintiff's theory is that if she knew or ought to have known of a fraud, then her knowledge is imputed to the defendant mortgagees.

- [204] Ms. Gabriel filed an expert report prepared by Craig Carter. Mr. Carter has practiced since 1979. His practice focuses on mortgage remedies, mortgage law and standards of practice. In his view, Ms. Gabriel met the requisite standard of practice. Mr. Carter focuses on the fact that Ms. Gabriel acted for the mortgagee. The mortgagee's lawyer is typically entitled to rely on the documentation and opinions received from the mortgagor's lawyer. In his view it would be unduly expensive to require a mortgagee's lawyer to reproduce what the mortgagor's lawyer has already done. He warns against applying the standard of a litigation lawyer who is dissecting the transaction afterwards with a view to establishing fraud as the appropriate standard for the prudent solicitor registering a mortgage.
- [205] According to Mr. Carter anomalies in the two by-laws would not constitute a red flag indicative of fraud. In his view, the purpose of a lawyer's review of the by-laws is to ensure that the person executing the security documents has the appropriate delegated authority from the corporation to sign and bind the corporation. The standard of practice does not require the lender's lawyer to review the by-laws of corporate or were looking for inconsistencies or flaws.
- [206] According to Mr. Craig, Ms. Gabriel was not required to notice the dissonance between the corporate name and the date of the two by-laws because a lender's solicitor is entitled to rely on the enforceability opinion provided by borrower's counsel. Moreover, it is not unusual for a corporation to be incorporated as a numbered company and then to have its name changed immediately to the name preferred by the client. It is not unusual for that to occur on the date of incorporation.
- [207] According to Mr. Craig, many of the issues that Mr. Aaron points to as being red flags are merely indicative of careless errors in corporate organization that occur all the time. In Mr. Craig's view, a change in corporate directors proximate to the lending date is not a red flag here. Corporations change directors all the time. It was several months between the change of directors and registration of the mortgages or advance on the mortgages. To the extent there was urgency in registering the mortgage, that is understandable. There were tax arrears and construction liens on the property. Both security holders were moving to enforce. While covering letters may be ideal, the absence of a covering letter is not a red flag of fraud. The alleged anomalies in the borrowing by-law are not evidence of fraud given that the borrowing by-law is not even necessary for the corporation to borrow. Nor is an anomaly in the appraisal a red flag with respect to Ms. Gabriel. Any requirement for an appraisal would come from the lender. The lender may demand or waive that requirement. It is not for the lender's lawyer to determine whether the appraisal is satisfactory. That is a business decision for the lender.
- [208] I accept Mr. Carter's evidence and find that Ms. Gabriel did not fall short of the standard of care.
- [209] In concluding on the issue of the mortgagees' liability, I return to the three legal hurdles I set out at the start of this section. The plaintiffs have not overcome any of those hurdles.
- [210] The plaintiffs have not demonstrated anything in the relationship between the mortgagees and Midas that would prevent the mortgagees from relying on the indoor management rule.

- [211] The plaintiffs have not demonstrated actual knowledge of any issue concerning the mortgage that would deprive them of the ability to rely on its registration.
- [212] Even if I accept the plaintiffs' complaints at full face value (which I do not) they do not amount to actual knowledge of any sort of a fraud. At best they amount to circumstances that might have led to further inquiry. The Court of Appeal has made it clear, however, in Stanbarr that sufficient information to put someone on inquiry is not enough. Actual knowledge is required.
- [213] Finally, the plaintiffs have introduced no evidence to overcome the principles articulated in Isaacs to the effect that conditions that a mortgagee may impose on a lending commitment such as appraisals or satisfactory leases are conditions imposed for the benefit of the mortgagee alone. The mortgagees are not required to perform a forensic analysis of such documents to protect Mr. Farrell from the consequences of having allowed Mr. Kavanagh to bind Midas.

VII. The Farrell Mortgage

- [214] After Mr. Farrell discovered the mortgage registered on the Yonge Street property, he registered a mortgage of $9,000,000 in his own favour. His stated reason was to prevent other fraudulent mortgages from being registered against the property. Mr. Farrell admits there were no advances made under the mortgage. The mortgagees ask me to declare Mr. Farrell's mortgage to be invalid as a fraudulent conveyance and to discharge it.
- [215] While Mr. Farrell is entitled to place security against his property, on the evidence before me, that security should not take priority over any judgment the mortgagees obtain as a result of this proceeding. As a result, any orders arising out of this proceeding will take priority over Mr. Farrell's mortgage.

VIII. Disposition

- [216] As a result of the foregoing, I make the following dispositive orders:
- (i) The plaintiffs' action is dismissed with costs.
  - (ii) I declare that the mortgagee's mortgage on the Yonge Street and Eastern Avenue properties are valid.
  - (iii) All monies paid into court to the credit of this action shall be paid to the mortgagees forthwith.
  - (iv) The mortgagees shall have judgment against Mr. Kavanagh pursuant to his guarantee in the amount of $8,518,279.40 as of February 3, 2020.

- (v) The plaintiffs' claim that Mr. Kavanagh is not a 50% shareholder of Midas is dismissed.
- (vi) The third party claims are dismissed

[217] Any party claiming costs as a result of these reasons may do so by January 18, 2021. Responding submissions should be delivered by February 1, 2021 with any reply delivered by February 8, 2021.

HEARD: In writing.

ENDORSEMENT

- [1] This is my costs endorsement arising out of reasons that I issued on December 31, 2020 indexed as 2020 ONSC 8154.
- [2] The action arises out of a mortgage with a face amount of $5,000,000 which now stands at approximately $9,000,000 when taking prejudgment interest into account. The plaintiffs brought a claim to set the mortgage aside on the basis that it was fraudulent and that the defendant mortgagees knew or ought to have known of the fraud.
- [3] I found against the plaintiffs at trial. In doing so I found that: there was nothing fraudulent about the mortgage, the plaintiffs knew and approved of it, it was part of a plan to remove the plaintiff, Thomas Farrell, from the face of his Canadian investments to protect him from his Irish creditors and was part of an overall pattern by Mr. Farrell to obtain loans, default on them and then try to manoeuvre the creditor into taking a substantial discount on the loan. The mortgage was one of those manoeuvres and the action should never have been brought.

- [4] Without repeating the findings of trial here, numerous paragraphs in the reasons for judgement refer to credibility issues on the part of the plaintiffs that underpin my view that the action should never have been brought in the first place and was nothing but an attempt by Mr. Farrell to get money from a lender and not repay it or repay only a portion of it. Those include paragraphs 6, 20, 21, 39, 43, 90, 96, 124 and 209 – 213.

I. Costs Claim of the Mortgagee Defendants

- [5] The mortgagee defendants seek costs of $1,603,576.90 on a substantial indemnity scale including HST and disbursements. Their partial indemnity claim is $1,508,092.40.

a. Scale of costs

- [6] Paragraph 22 of the mortgage provides for payment of all legal fees on a solicitor client basis.
- [7] It is well-established that where there is a contractual right to recover costs, the costs award ought to reflect that right: Bosse v. Mastercraft.<sup>1</sup> Although courts retain a discretion to refuse to enforce the contractual right where there is good reason to do so, I see no such reason here.
- [8] In addition to the contractual right to substantial indemnity costs, a higher cost award is also justified by the plaintiffs' conduct. As already noted, this action should never have been brought in the first place. It involved unfounded allegations of fraud. The plaintiffs failed to produce relevant documents, including documents relating to City of Toronto taxes, correspondence with Mr. Fellin and documents concerning the loan from Peter Vroon which loan the plaintiffs also alleged was fraudulent. When confronted with pretty much indisputable proof that Mr. Farrell was aware of the loan from Mr. Vroon from the get-go and benefited from that loan, he finally conceded at trial that the benefit he obtained from the Vroon loan should be taken into account when rendering judgment.

[9] That sort of misconduct in litigation warrants an elevated scale of costs.

b. Claim against Vroon

[10] The plaintiffs submit that the Mortgagees are not entitled to their costs for the proceeding against Mr. Vroon because that proceeding was ultimately dismissed on grounds of jurisdiction.

[11] In my view, the Mortgagees are entitled to recover their costs of the claim against Mr. Vroon from the plaintiffs.

[12] Mr. Vroon was brought into the action solely because the plaintiffs alleged that the transaction with him was fraudulent. It clearly was not. The plaintiffs' own Irish solicitor was involved in the transaction and helped paper it. When this was demonstrated beyond doubt, the plaintiffs finally conceded that any benefit they received from the $1.5 million Vroon transaction should be taken into account of this action.

[13] In my view, the plaintiffs' conduct with respect to the Vroon loan did not reflect a genuine error but reflected part of their overall conduct of avoiding debts wherever they could and putting their creditors to unnecessary expense as part of the strategy of persuading creditors to compromise their claims.

[14] Had the plaintiffs never brought a third-party claim against Mr. Vroon, they would likely never have discovered the documents that established the loan from him was legitimate and was known to Mr. Farrell.

c. Deductions to the Mortgagees' Costs Claim

[15] The plaintiffs point out that the Mortgagees claim costs for nine motions in respect of which the court made no order as to costs. The plaintiffs submit that in those circumstances it is as though the court ordered no cost with respect to the motions.<sup>2</sup> The plaintiffs submit that $64,324.12 including HST should be deducted on this account.

[16] That general rule applies where the matter was adjudicated and a court decided that no costs should be awarded. It does not apply to consent or unopposed motions where the court did not turn its mind to costs.<sup>3</sup>

[17] Even if the motion was ultimately unopposed or on consent, it was still necessary for the Mortgagees to have brought the motions. Given that the Mortgagees were entirely successful and given the plaintiffs' contractual right to substantial indemnity, that right should be honoured. The contractual right to elevated costs should not be carved back for certain procedural steps the plaintiffs were required to bring when in fact, they should not have been required to bring any procedural steps because the proceeding should never have been initiated against them.

[18] A further motion was withdrawn by the mortgagees. The endorsement in that motion indicates that the motion was withdrawn “without costs.” Costs should not be claimed for that motion. The issue of costs was adjudicated on. The Mortgagees’ costs should be reduced by $29,907.71, including HST, to reflect that motion.

d. Reasonableness of Mortgagees’ Costs Claim

[19] The plaintiffs submit that the Mortgagees’ costs claim is unreasonable because they claim $1,603,576 in substantial indemnity costs whereas the plaintiffs’ substantial indemnity costs were only $966,145. The plaintiffs say this violates the principles of reasonableness set out in Boucher v. Public Accountants Council.<sup>4</sup> I disagree.

[20] It is usually more expensive to establish a claim than to defend one. Although the Mortgagees were technically in the position of defendants here, they were the de facto plaintiffs. Their objective was to recover on the debt and enforce the mortgage. Their counterclaim did that. The plaintiffs were plaintiffs in name only. They simply made a bald allegation that the mortgage was fraudulent and left it to the Mortgagees to prove the contrary.

[21] In proving the contrary, the Mortgagees were forced to navigate the Byzantine web of facts that the plaintiffs wove around them and were forced to obtain documentary production from third parties because the plaintiffs defaulted on their obligation to do so. Those two factors made the litigation substantially more expensive than it otherwise would have been.

- [22] It would be completely unjust to allow the plaintiffs to make false allegations of fraud, refuse to produce documents thereby making the action more expensive for the Mortgagees to defend and then reduce the Mortgagees' costs because the plaintiffs claim they are unnecessarily high. If the Mortgagees' costs are unnecessarily high, that is the fault of the plaintiffs.
- [23] I also note that the Mortgagees' lawyers were from a larger firm than the plaintiffs' lawyer and would therefore have a higher cost structure to begin with. This would come as no surprise to the plaintiffs' lawyer and should therefore have come as no surprise to the plaintiffs.

II. Costs Claim of the Defendant Colina King

- [24] Ms. King claims substantial indemnity costs in the amount of $290,410.64 including HST and disbursements.
- [25] Substantial indemnity costs are appropriate where there has been reprehensible, scandalous or outrageous conduct on the part of a party, including allegations of fraud that are not made out a trial.<sup>5</sup>
- [26] Conduct that justifies substantial indemnity costs is not limited to conduct in the proceedings themselves but includes the circumstances that give rise to the litigation.<sup>6</sup>

[27] The plaintiffs clearly made allegations that attacked the integrity of Ms. King. Ms. King is a lawyer for whom such allegations are extremely damaging. The cross-examination at trial was one that essentially suggested Ms. King was lying on the stand. One of the allegations pursued against Ms. King was that she did whatever she was asked to by Mr. Fellin to perpetrate the fraud. As noted earlier, the plaintiffs were working in close cooperation with Mr. Fellin to organize a scheme whereby Mr. Farrell would be removed from the face of the companies in Canada to protect him from his Irish creditors. Mr. Farrell failed to produce his extensive correspondence with Mr. Fellin which would have helped demonstrate that arrangement. Having entered into a plan with Mr. Fellin and having refused to produce relevant documents, the plaintiffs then attacked Ms. King's credibility at trial and accused her of professional negligence for, among other things, following Mr. Fellin's directions.

[28] That is precisely the sort of reprehensible conduct for which substantial indemnity costs are appropriate.

[29] The plaintiffs have not taken issue with the amount of costs Ms. King claims, although they dispute entitlement to substantial indemnity costs. I award Ms. King her costs in the amount of $209,410.64 as requested.

III. Costs Claim of the Third Parties

[30] The third parties, Grace and Rocco Commisso claim costs of $98,810.30 including HST and disbursements. The third party Margaret Pastore claims costs of $26,632.44 including HST and disbursements. Both claim costs on a partial indemnity scale.

- [31] Both sets of third parties claim their costs from the Mortgagees. Both rely on the principle set out in Milina v. Bartsch<sup>7</sup> to the effect that a plaintiff who was unsuccessful against a defendant will not usually be responsible for the costs of the third party.
- [32] An exception to the principle in Milina arises where the proceedings against the third party followed naturally and inevitably from the plaintiff's action in the sense that the defendant had no real alternative but to join the third party.<sup>8</sup> I find that this exception applies here.
- [33] The third parties received payments from the allegedly fraudulent mortgage. The true actors in the third party piece were Rocco Commisso and Gino Pastore. Mr. Commisso received approximately $391,993.90 from the impugned mortgage. Mr. Pastore received $202,750. In both cases their wives were included as third parties because they had arranged to have the payments channeled to their wives. There is no dispute that their wives knew nothing about the matter.
- [34] Messrs. Commisso and Pastore assert that the fees they received were on account of finders' fees for the mortgage. Neither is a mortgage broker. Neither has produced any agreement entitling them to a finders' fee. There was, however, an arm's length mortgage broker involved who also received a commission and who produced an agreement entitling him to a fee.

- [35] Neither Mr. Commisso nor Mr. Pastore could demonstrate what they did for the funds other than have several dinners and drinks with Mr. Farrell. The finders' fees were out of all proportion to any evidence of work done to obtain the mortgage.
- [36] For the plaintiffs to resist the allegations that the mortgage was fraudulent, they had to join those involved in obtaining the mortgage. Although it does not appear that the Mortgagees obtained material information from Messrs. Commisso or Pastore, they did obtain material information from other third parties who were more deeply involved like Messrs. Vroon and Fellin. The Mortgagees did not, however, have any way of knowing when they commenced the third party claims, from which third party they would obtain helpful information. At the same time, the Mortgagees did not have the luxury of time. Limitation periods were running. The Mortgagees could not wait until discoveries to decide to join third parties. Even had they done so, it would have done them no good because the plaintiffs falsely denied any connection with the third parties and improperly failed to produce documents which demonstrated a connection with them.
- [37] Neither of Messrs. Commisso or Pastore produced any invoices or other documentary evidence to substantiate their claims to for a commission. It appears that even if they were required to bear their own costs, they would still have made out quite well given the minimal evidence before me at trial of any work they actually did for their commission.
- [38] Although the plaintiffs did not join the third parties as defendants, they nevertheless alleged in paragraph 9 of their reply and defence to the Mortgagees' counterclaim that the third parties were fraudsters. In those circumstances, it was appropriate for the Mortgagees to continue their claims against the third parties.

- [39] In the foregoing circumstances I am satisfied that the third party claim arose naturally out of the plaintiffs' claim against the Mortgagees so as to make it appropriate for the Mortgagees to join the third parties. In those circumstances it is appropriate to order the plaintiffs to pay the Mortgagees their costs of pursuing the third parties. It is also appropriate to have the third parties claim their costs from the plaintiffs and not from the Mortgagees.
- [40] Although I will award the third parties their costs, their only course of recovery will be from the plaintiffs and not from the Mortgagees.
- [41] Given the current face amount of the mortgage and the value of the property, it is also appropriate to provide directions about the priority associated with each party's costs claim. The costs of the Mortgagees should be bundled together with the outstanding amount of the mortgage and be secured against the real estate as is the mortgage itself. Next in rank should be Ms. King. I would rank the third parties behind Ms. King in terms of priority for recovery for costs. I do so because the third parties have already made substantial amounts of money on the transactions at issue without really having demonstrated anything to justify the funds they have received. Even if they have to pay their own costs, they will still have done quite well of the transaction. The third parties will, however, rank ahead of the mortgage that Mr. Farrell placed on the Yonge Street property. I give that direction because Mr. Farrell admitted at trial that he registered a mortgage against the Yonge Street property in his favour not because he advanced funds in connection with the property but because he wanted to prevent further allegedly fraudulent mortgages from being registered on title.

Disposition

[42] For the reasons set out above I order the following:

- (a) The plaintiffs shall pay the costs of the Mortgagees on a substantial indemnity scale which I fix at $1,573,669.19.
- (b) The plaintiffs shall pay the costs of Colina King on a substantial indemnity scale which I fix at $290,410.64.
- (c) The plaintiffs shall pay the costs of Grace and Rocco Commisso on a partial indemnity scale which I fix at $98,810.30.
- (d) The plaintiffs shall pay the costs of the Margaret Pastore on a partial indemnity scale which I fix at $26,632.44.

All of the foregoing cost awards include HST and disbursement.

[43] The cost awards are collectible according to the priorities set out in paragraph 41 of these reasons.

6. THIS COURT ORDERS that for the purposes of determining the nature and priority of Claims, the net proceeds from the sale of the Purchased Assets shall stand in the place and stead of the Purchased Assets, and that from and after the delivery of the Receiver's Certificate all Claims and Encumbrances shall attach to the net proceeds from the sale of the Purchased Assets with the same priority as they had with respect to the Purchased Assets immediately prior to the sale, as if the Purchased Assets had not been sold and remained in the possession or control of the person having that possession or control immediately prior to the sale.

7. THIS COURT ORDERS AND DIRECTS the Receiver to file with the Court a copy of the Receiver's Certificate, forthwith after delivery thereof.

the vesting of the Purchased Assets in the Purchaser pursuant to this Order shall be binding on any trustee in bankruptcy that may be appointed in respect of the Debtor and shall not be void or voidable by creditors of the Debtor, nor shall it constitute nor be deemed to be a fraudulent preference, assignment, fraudulent conveyance, transfer at undervalue, or other reviewable transaction under the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act (Canada) or any other applicable federal or provincial legislation, nor shall it constitute oppressive or unfairly prejudicial conduct pursuant to any applicable federal or provincial legislation.

9. THIS COURT HEREBY REQUESTS the aid and recognition of any court, tribunal, regulatory or administrative body having jurisdiction in Canada or in the United States to give effect to this Order and to assist the Receiver and its agents in carrying out the terms of this Order.  Time Table approved (as follows): _____

Date Heard: August 12, 2021

1. This endorsement should be read together with my endorsement of April 9, 2021. Much of the background to the motion is contained in that endorsement which I will not repeat here.
2. On this motion, the Receiver of The Midas Investment Corporation (“Midas”) seeks an order approving the sale of a property at 205 Yonge St. in Toronto. I approved the sale at the end of the hearing on August 12 and indicated that reasons would follow today.
3. Mr. Kevin Sherkin and appeared on behalf of Mr. Kavanagh. Mr. Sherkin indicated that he had just been retained on the day of the motion and sought an adjournment to file materials. He also indicated that he expected funds to arrive in his trust account within a day or two which would allow Midas to entirely pay out the mortgage on the Yonge Street property and on the Eastern Avenue property.

4. I declined the adjournment. I had indicated on August 6, 2021 that the motion would be proceeding on August 12. The motion is not complex. The issue is whether the Receiver complied with the principles in Soundair so as to lead the court to approve the sale of the 205 Yonge St. property.
5. Although Mr. Kavanagh's earlier lawyer, Mr. Zuker indicated that he could not appear on August 12 because he was hoping to take a few days off, Mr. Zuker was accompanied by Nancy Tourgis, an experienced commercial litigator who was more than qualified to argue the motion on Mr. Kavanagh's behalf. In the email correspondence surrounding the scheduling of the motion, I was given no reason for which Ms. Tourgis could not argue the motion.
6. Mr. Kavanagh resisted the sale of the Eastern Avenue property at the hearings on August 3 and August 5 on the basis that the sale did not comply with the sales approval order of Justice Dunphy. No such argument is advanced with respect to the Yonge Street property. On August 3 and 5 Mr. Kavanagh noted that there was no evidence about what the Receiver did to market the Yonge St. property. That was correct but there was no motion in respect of Yonge St at that time. The Receiver has since delivered a motion record for the Yonge St. sale.

7. In Royal Bank of Canada v. Soundair Corp., 1991 CanLII 2727 the Ontario Court of Appeal set out the duties of a court when deciding whether a receiver who has sold a property acted properly:
  - i. It should consider whether the receiver has made a sufficient effort to get the best price and has not acted improvidently.
  - ii. It should consider the interests of all parties.
  - iii. It should consider the efficacy and integrity of the process by which offers are obtained.
  - iv. It should consider whether there has been unfairness in the working out of the process.
8. Since then, these factors have been broadly accepted as the benchmarks to consider when approving a proposed sale by a court ordered receiver.
9. I am satisfied when considering these factors that the proposed sale should be approved.
  - i. Sufficient Effort to Get the Best Price
10. I am satisfied that the Receiver made sufficient efforts to obtain the best price for the property. Those steps include the following:
  - i. It obtained an appraisal from Avison Young on May 25, 2021.

- ii. It retained Institutional Property Advisors (“IPA) to market and sell the property.
- iii. IPA listed the property on MLS.
- iv. IPA obtained and compiled due diligence information and created a virtual data room.
- v. IPA prepared an investment summary for distribution to prospective investors.
- vi. IPA initiated an electronic marketing campaign which included a broad email blast to over 2000 potential investors from its own distribution list, and marketed the property through its own broker network.
- vii. IPA advertised the property in the Globe and Mail on July 6 and July 8.
- viii. IPA made targeted calls to key investors.

11. As a result of those efforts, 17 investors expressed interest, 7 toured the property. Four investors made offers on July 14, 2021. The Receiver invited two of the four to participate in a second round of bidding and to resubmit improved offers by July 20, 2021.

12. The offer that the Receiver proposes compares favourably with the appraisal it received and is the highest of the offers received.
13. The combined payments from the Eastern Avenue and Young Street properties are sufficient to pay out all encumbrances on both properties.
14. In addition, the Receiver does not believe that further marketing would result in a superior realization on the Yonge Street property. It is a property that has fallen into serious disrepair and was sold on an as is where is basis.
15. In my view, the foregoing steps demonstrate that the Receiver has acted reasonably in making efforts to get the best price for the property and has not acted improvidently.

ii. The Interests of the Parties

16. The offer that is being proposed is in the interests of all parties. The payouts on both the Eastern Avenue and Yonge Street properties are sufficient to pay off encumbrances (assuming the sales are able to close quickly and payouts can be made quickly). That means mortgagees will be fully paid after years of waiting. It also means that Mr. Kavanagh will be absolved of the risk of further liability on his guarantee.
17. Although Midas and Mr. Kavanagh may not enjoy the upside of any potential additional value on the two properties, in my view they are not entitled to that upside for the reasons set out in paragraphs 39 and 40 of my endorsement dated August 9, 2021.

iii. Efficacy and Integrity

18. The receiver has run an efficient process. Efficiency and timing are of benefit to the parties. The mortgage bears a relatively high rate of interest. The faster a sale can be achieved, the more likely it is that the mortgagees will be paid out fully and the less likely it is that the guarantors will be exposed to personal liability.
19. There is no suggestion that the Receiver did not act with integrity.

iv. Fairness in the Process

20. I am satisfied that the process has been fair to the parties.
21. Midas and Mr. Kavanagh no doubt feel that it is unfair that they have been deprived of the opportunity to redeem the mortgages. I have addressed that issue in my reasons of August 9, 2021 and will not repeat those here except to underscore that the issues with respect to the Yonge Street property involve the integrity of the judicial process and the process of court supervised receivership sales. Midas and Mr. Kavanagh have had ample time to redeem the mortgage. If debtors are permitted to redeem after a receiver has gone through the effort of running a sales process and after arm's length parties have committed energy and potentially set aside capital to complete the transaction on which they are bidding, court supervised receivership sales run the risk of obtaining lower prices because of the uncertainty associated with them.
22. When balancing the potential unfairness to Midas and Mr. Kavanagh of being deprived of the chance to redeem the mortgage at this late stage against the unfairness to the mortgagees of still not actually having funds for redemption available and the threat to receiverships as a whole, there is, in my mind, no contest. Any perceived unfairness to which Midas and Mr. Kavanagh are subject is entirely of their own making.

Sealing Order

23. The receiver also seeks a sealing order with respect to confidential appendices to its report. The appendices consist of the Avison Young appraisal, a marketing summary prepared by the receiver and the offer for which approval is sought.

24. The test and analysis with respect to sealing orders is contained in my reasons of August 9 in paragraphs 41 – 43. I grant the sealing order for the reasons contained in those paragraphs.

25. I would, however, make one revision to the scope of the sealing order here. The marketing summary contains a great deal of information that is public and does not reveal any views about the value of the property. On my reading, the only page of the marketing summary that contains confidential information is the page headed “Offers Summary and Final Result” which is page 127 of the motion record. I advised the Receiver during the hearing that it will be required to file a public version of the marketing summary which redacts that page. I have since been advised that this has been done.

Distribution Order

26. At the conclusion of the hearing, Mr. Preger for the applicants asked that I also issue a distribution order to authorize the Receiver to pay out funds received on the sale. I declined to do so on the record before me.
27. That relief was not sought in the Notice of Motion for this hearing. I have no material that indicates how much the Receiver proposes to distribute to which parties or on what basis.
28. A distribution also raises potential issues with respect to an appeal of my underlying judgment. As a general rule, orders for the payment of money are stayed pending appeal while others are not. Although Paciocco J.A. dismissed Midas' motion to stay the sale of the properties pending appeal, I was not prepared to issue a distribution order on the spur of the moment without having at least the opportunity to review his reasons to determine whether they also allow the distribution of any funds generated on the sale of the properties. It strikes me that a payment out might be subject to a different analysis than the sale of the properties. At a minimum, I and the respondents should have the opportunity to think that issue through on a proper record.

Date of Hearing:

October 19, 2021

ENDORSEMENT

Introduction

[1] Rosen Goldberg Inc., the Court-appointed Receiver (the "Receiver") of The Midas Investment Corporation ("Midas"), moves for an order approving and authorizing the Receiver to the distribute funds from the proceeds from the sale of properties at 205 Yonge Street and 90 Eastern Avenue over which the Applicants hold a first mortgage (the "Mortgage") in accordance with the recommendation set out in the Fifth Report of the Receiver dated September 8, 2021.

[2] Midas and John Kavanagh, a guarantor (together, the "Responding Parties"), dispute the distribution recommended by the Receiver on several grounds. In particular, they dispute distribution of (a) $156,375 plus HST on account of a "manager's fee", (b) $278,413.70 on account of mortgage extension fees; (c) $125,000.01 on account of three months' interest bonus; (d) $358,897.67 on account of protective disbursements; (e) the calculation of interest with compounding.

[3] I address the objections of the Responding Parties below.

Analysis

Are the Applicants entitled to a distribution that includes the management fee?

[4] The Responding Parties object to distribution of money in reimbursement of management fees plus HST in the amount of $176,703.75 charged to the Applicants by C & K Mortgage Services Inc., a mortgage broker that operates as Rescom Capital ("Rescom").

[5] The Mortgage provides, at paragraph 15 of Schedule "A":

15. Manager's Fee

In the event of default herein, C & K Mortgage Services Inc. will be appointed as the Chargee's Manager at the Chargee's discretion and will be entitled to a fee of $250.00 per hour for its services and such fee will be charged to the Chargor's account, and added to the amount owing under this Charge.

[6] The Responding Parties submit that payment of the management fee is not permitted because it is not a legitimate cost of enforcing payment of the mortgage debt, rather, in essence, the charge for management fee is an attempt by the Applicants to, after default, begin to charge Midas for their own administrative expenses. The Responding Parties submit that Rescom was managing the Mortgage when it was not in default without charging its time for administration. They submit that the charge for management fees penalizes Midas and has the effect of imposing a fee on the borrower upon a default in a manner that is contrary to s. 8 of the Interest Act.

[7] In support of this submission, the Responding Parties rely on P.A.R.C.E.L. Inc. v. Acquaviva, 2015 ONCA 331. In that case, the mortgage provided that the mortgagees were entitled to a late charge in the event of their late receipt of monthly payments due under the mortgage. The mortgage also provided for payment of a missed payment fee if payments under the mortgage were missed or late or returned for payment. The Court of Appeal, at para. 95, noted that the respondents on appeal pointed to no evidence in the record demonstrating that they incurred any actual losses as a result of late or missed payments under the mortgage, apart from the amount of the nonpayment itself. There was no evidence the non-payments gave rise to administrative costs. The Court of Appeal concluded, at para. 96, that in the absence of evidence that the charges in question reflect real costs legitimately incurred for the recovery of the debt, in the form of actual administrative costs or otherwise, the only reason for the charges was to impose an additional penalty or fine, apart from the interest otherwise payable under the mortgage, thereby increasing the burden on the mortgagors beyond the rate of interest agreed upon in the mortgage. The Court of Appeal held that the late payment charges and default fees constituted fines or penalties prohibited under s. 8 of the Interest Act.

[8] The Responding Parties also rely on BMMB Investments Limited v. Naimian, 2020 ONSC 7999 (CanLII). In BMMB, Myers J. addressed whether disbursements that the mortgagee allegedly incurred in enforcing the mortgage were recoverable as part of the mortgage debt. Myers J. observed that none of the alleged disbursements was proven by an invoice and the concluded that there was no basis in the evidence to determine that the costs were incurred at the amount claimed let alone to assess the reasonableness of the alleged expenditures. Myers J. held, at para. 28, “[i]t does no injustice to any plaintiff to require it to adduce evidence to support disbursements for which it claims reimbursement. As no evidence is adduced by the plaintiff to support any of the costs for which it claims reimbursement, none is allowed”.

[9] In response to these submissions, the Applicants rely on the evidence given by Rescom’s President, Gary Gruneir. Mr. Gruneir’s evidence is not challenged by other evidence and he was not cross-examined.

[10] Mr. Gruneir’s evidence is that Rescom’s revenue model is to earn lender’s fees for originating and extending mortgage loans and, to a much lesser extent, administration fees for distributing monthly payments to its investors. It has a staff of six mortgage agents, who originate loans, one accounting person, and three administrative/clerical staff. Unlike an institutional lender, as a broker, Rescom does not have an in-house workout group. Mr. Gruneir’s evidence is that managing workouts of non-performing loans is a distraction and the time associated with managing workouts is time that could otherwise be spent originating loans and earning lender’s and extension fees.

[11] Mr. Gruneir’s evidence is that the private mortgage loans that Rescom originates are syndicated among investors, whereby investors hold proportionate interests in the loan. Because these mortgages are held by a syndicate of investors, in order to facilitate administration upon default, the mortgages, including the Mortgage, include a provision for a management fee to be charged by Rescom to the mortgagor's account and added to the amount owing under the charge, upon default. Rescom was appointed by the Applicants to manage the recovery of the Mortgage when default occurred in 2013.

[12] Mr. Gruneir's evidence is that this contractual provision enabled the Applicants to have Rescom as a single point of contact with respect to efforts to collect and enforce on the loan and to obtain reporting regarding those efforts. This facilitated and simplified the process of instructing counsel, and receiving advice from counsel in connection with defending the action by Midas and Thomas Farrell challenging the validity of the mortgage and pursuing recovery in the receivership proceedings. Mr. Gruneir's evidence is that this process alleviated the need for counsel to obtain instructions from and give advice to each individual Applicant, which would have been administratively cumbersome, time-consuming and very expensive.

[13] Mr. Gruneir appends to one of his affidavits a copy of Rescom's time records over the past eight years in relation to the Mortgage following default. During the period identified in the time records, Rescom spent a total of 625.5 hours in managing the Mortgage on behalf of the Applicants.

[14] The Applicants rely on 7084421 Canada Ltd. v. Vinczer, 2020 ONSC 217 in support of their submission that the management fee does not offend s. 8 of the Interest Act. In Vinczer, the mortgagors moved to set aside a default judgment. The motion judge concluded that the mortgagee was entitled to judgment on the mortgage, and considered whether the mortgagee was entitled to management fees charged. The management fee was charged based on a provision in the mortgage for a management fee based on 5% of the mortgage principal which the borrower acknowledged is a reasonable estimate of the fees to be incurred. The motion judge held, at para. 77, that the management fee was connected to a rational purpose and that the mortgagee would undoubtedly incur costs associated with enforcing the mortgage through internal time and expenses. The motion judge noted that although he could speculate that the amount of actual costs incurred was less than the management fee calculated as a percentage of the principal amount, there was no evidence that would allow a comparison to be made. The motion judge concluded that the management fee must be enforced.

[15] I am satisfied based on Mr. Gruneir's evidence that the Applicants incurred real costs that were legitimately incurred through charges by Rescom of management fees for services provided to collect the Mortgage debt and enforce the Mortgage. Mr. Gruneir provided detailed time dockets of the time spent for which Rescom charged fees at the hourly rate specified in the Mortgage. Although Rescom administered the Mortgage before default without charging a fee, I accept that the nature of the services needed to manage a mortgage loan that is in default would differ from services needed to administer a mortgage loan in good standing. I do not accept that Rescom is simply seeking to recover overhead expenses through the management fees. The time spent for which management fees were charged, supported by the time dockets, extended over a number of years while Midas challenged the validity of the Mortgage.

[16] The management fee does not constitute fines or penalties that are prohibited by the Interest Act. I do not allow this objection.

Are the Applicants entitled to a distribution that includes the extension fee charged by Rescom?

[17] The commitment that Rescom issued in connection with the Mortgage (the "Commitment") provides, in paragraph 20:

Notwithstanding paragraph 19, in the event the loan is not repaid at maturity or the lender and borrower have not come to agreeable renewal terms, a fee equal to one twelfth of one per cent of the principal amount of the loan will be added to the account for each month that the loan has gone past maturity. At no time will payment of this amount be considered a renewal of the mortgage.

[18] The proposed distribution includes $278,413 in mortgage extension fees.

[19] The Responding Parties oppose distribution of the amount representing extension fees. They submit that payment of extension fees would have the effect of allowing the Applicants to charge a higher rate of interest on money in arrears than that charged on principal money not in arrears and, therefore, such payment is prohibited because it would offend s. 8(1) of the Interest Act.

[20] The Responding Parties rely on P.A.R.C.E.L., at para. 96:

In the absence of evidence that the charges in question reflect real costs legitimately incurred by the respondents for the recovery of the debt, in the form of actual administrative costs or otherwise, the only reason for the charges was to impose an additional penalty or fine, apart from the interest otherwise payable under the Mortgage, thereby increasing the burden on the appellants beyond the rate of interest agreed upon in the Mortgage. The courts have not hesitated to disallow similar charges on the basis that they offend s. 8 of the Interest Act: [citations omitted].

[21] The Applicants rely on evidence from Mr. Gruneir that Rescom and its investors typically charge borrowers an origination fee of 2-4% of the principal amount of a mortgage loan. When private mortgages are extended, they typically charge an extension fee of 1-2% of principal. When private mortgages cease to perform and enforcement becomes protracted, Rescom and its investors are prevented from re-investing their sunken funds in the market and suffer the loss of opportunity associated with earning lender's fees and extension fees on the sunken funds. His evidence is that, for this reason, the payout statement includes a charge for mortgage extension fees. Mr. Gruneir's evidence is that in the circumstances, in which Midas actively sought to avoid repaying the Mortgage by challenging its validity over a period of eight years and, in the process, prevented Rescom and the Applicants from earning lender's and extension fees on the principal money advance, the extension fees charged are reasonable.

[22] The extension fees do not represent charges for work done by Rescom to enforce the Mortgage and recover payment of the mortgage debt. In this respect, the extension fees differ from the management fees.

[23] As noted by Cronk J.A. in P.A.R.C.E.L., at paras. 53-56, there are several prerequisites to the application of s. 8 of the Interest Act. The first is that there must be a finding that the covenant in question imposes a "fine", "penalty", or "rate of interest". Second, the "fine", "penalty" or "rate of interest" must relate to "any arrears of principal or interest secured by mortgage on real property". The arrears may arise on default occurring before or after maturity of the relevant debt instrument. Third, the covenant must also have the prohibited effect of "increasing the charge on the arrears beyond the rate of interest payable on principal money not in arrears". Finally, the arrears of principal or interest must be "secured by mortgage on real property".

[24] The rationale for charging the extension fee may have been, as Mr. Gruneir explained, because the Rescom and the Applicants were prevented from reinvesting their sunken funds and, as a result, they were deprived of lender's fees and extension fees on new loans. Nevertheless, there is no evidence that the charge of extension fees reflect real costs legitimately incurred by the Applicants or Rescom for the recovery of the mortgage debt. The extension fees only apply on default and the charge of such extension fees imposed an additional penalty or fine, apart from interest otherwise payable, thereby increasing the burden on Midas beyond the agreed upon rate of interest in the Mortgage. See P.A.R.C.E.L., at para. 96.

[25] The extension fees in the amount of $278,413.70 contravene the Interest Act. The extension fees are disallowed.

Are the Applicants entitled to a distribution of amounts that include an interest bonus?

[26] The Responding Parties object to payment of three months' interest bonus under the Mortgage.

[27] The Mortgage provides in paragraph 14 of the Additional Provisions:

In the event default is made in the payment of any principal money, at the time or times provided herein, the Chargee will not be required to accept payment of the principal monies without first receiving three (3) months notice in writing or receiving three (3) months interest bonus in advance payment of the principal monies.

[28] The Responding Parties submit that the interest bonus is a penalty that is imposed on default and has the effect of increasing the interest on arrears to a cost that is higher than what is included in the Mortgage. The Responding Parties submit that the interest bonus contravenes s. 8 of the Interest Act and is unenforceable.

[29] The Responding Parties rely on the decision of Myers J. in BMMB. In that case, Myers J. heard a motion for summary judgment to enforce a mortgage. One issue was whether the lender's charge of three months' interest was unenforceable because the payment violates s. 8 of the Interest Act. The relevant provision in the mortgage in BMMB reads:

If the Indebtedness and any of the other sums which may be due hereunder or under the Security Documents are not repaid on or before the Balance Due Date, then the Chargor agrees to pay the Chargee in addition to the amounts required to obtain a discharge, three months interest at the rate of interest chargeable hereunder on the principal amount outstanding on the Balance Due Date.

[30] Myers J. disallowed the charge of three months' interest on the basis that the provision in the mortgage requiring the mortgagor, after default, to pay an additional three months' interest is a clear violation of s. 8 of the Interest Act. Myers J. noted that the application of the provision arose on the mortgagee enforcing the mortgage. It was not a prepayment or a voluntary payment by the mortgagor. Myers J. held that this provision is a clear violation of s. 8 of the Interest Act.

[31] Myers J. relied on the decision of the Court of Appeal in Mastercraft Properties Ltd. v. El Ef Investments Inc., 1993 CanLII 8545 (On CA). In Mastercraft, a covenant in a mortgage required the borrower, following default under the mortgage, to give three months' notice of payment or pay a bonus in lieu thereof. The prepayment provision in Mastercraft reads:

And the said Mortgagor covenants with the Mortgagee that in the event of non-payment of the said principal moneys at the time or times above provided, he shall not require the Mortgagee to accept payment of the said principal moneys without first giving three months' previous notice in writing, or paying a bonus equal to three months' interest in advance on the said principal moneys.

[32] This provision is the like the prepayment provision in the Mortgage in that it provides that, after default, the mortgagee is not required to accept payment of principal without first receiving three months' notice in writing or receiving three months' interest bonus.

[33] The Court of Appeal in Mastercraft held that the "bonus" stipulated for is not an amount paid in punishment for a breach of the mortgage contract, but is a payment required for the privilege of paying arrears without the necessity of giving the three months' notice contracted for. The Court of Appeal held, accordingly, that the "bonus" was not a "fine" or "penalty". The Court of Appeal went on to consider whether the "bonus" constitutes a "rate of interest" charged on "arrears of principal or interest" and held that it does not. The Court of Appeal noted that in circumstances where the mortgagor did not wish to give the notice contracted for, the extraction of the bonus could have the effect referred to in s. 8 of the Interest Act, but, "the effect is irrelevant if the payment stipulated for does not fall within the categories of 'fine', 'penalty' or 'rate of interest'".

[34] The Court of Appeal in Mastercraft addressed other lines of cases in which covenants to pay additional interest on default were held to be invalid, and held that the cases cited fall into different factual categories. The Court of Appeal drew a distinction between the prepayment provision in the mortgage before it and the provision in another case, Tomell Investments Ltd. v. East Marstock Lands Ltd., 1977 CanLII 33 (SCC), where the covenant provided that on default, the mortgagee shall be entitled to require payment of a bonus equal to three months' interest. The Court of Appeal held that such a provision would be in clear contravention of s. 8 of the Interest Act. The Court of Appeal held that the prepayment provision in the Mastercraft mortgage on the appeal did not offend s. 8 of the Interest Act.

[35] In BMMB, the provision in the mortgage for payment of three months' interest did not provide for the borrower to give three months' notice or to pay three months' interest. As Myers J. held, at para. 58, the provision "adds an obligation to pay three months' interest if the mortgagor fails to repay the mortgage debt in full on the due date". The required payment "is not a payment in lieu of notice". Myers J. held that the prepayment clause created an unenforceable penalty that contravened s. 8 of the Interest Act.

[36] In support of their submission, the Responding Parties also rely on Vinczer. In Vinczer, the mortgage contained a provision that, after default, the lender will not be required to accept payment of principal monies without first receiving three additional months' notice in writing or receiving three months' interest bonus. This provision is like paragraph 14 of the Mortgage.

[37] The motion judge in Vinczer, Boswell J., referred to s. 17(1) of the Mortgages Act which provides that on default in payment of principal money secured by a mortgage a mortgagor may make such payment upon payment of three months interest, or the mortgagor may give the mortgagee at least three months notice in writing of the intention to make such payment at a time named in the notice and, upon making such payment, the mortgagor is entitled to make the payment of principal without further payment of interest except to the date of payment. Boswell J. held that the rationale behind s. 17 ceases to make sense when a mortgage goes into default after maturity.

[38] In support of his decision in Vinczer, Boswell J. cited his decision in Lee v. He, 2018 ONSC 5932. In Lee, Boswell J. held that a mortgagee was not entitled to charge a bonus of three months' interest under s. 17 of the Mortgages Act where the mortgage was not paid in full at the end of the one year term and, at paras. 24-27, he explained his reasoning:

[24] Section 17 is incorporated into every mortgage in Ontario. Its purpose was discussed by the Court of Appeal in Mastercraft Properties Ltd. v. EL EF Investments Inc., 1993 CarswellOnt 614. There, McKinley J.A. said as follows, at paragraph 21:

... The provision protects the mortgagor by permitting payment of arrears without penalty, or by permitting early redemption at a price. It protects the mortgagee by giving him a three-month period during which to arrange for reinvestment of his principal, or monies to compensate for lack of that notice. The option is that of the mortgagor. (Emphasis mine [Boswell J.]

[25] Mortgages are secured loans. Loans are contractual arrangements. Pursuant to the loan agreement, the borrower is entitled to the use of the lender's capital for some stipulated period of time. The lender, in return, is entitled to a stream of interest income, in addition to the ultimate repayment of its capital. When a borrower goes into default, the lender is theoretically entitled not only to repayment of its capital, but also to the present value of the lost income it would have received by way of interest had the breach not occurred. The lender's damages are, of course, subject to the requirement that it take steps to reasonably mitigate its losses through the reinvestment of its capital.

[26] Providing that a mortgagor in default may redeem the mortgage on the payment of three months interest, or on the provision of three months notice, serves to cap the damages payable for the mortgagee's lost income stream, while concurrently fixing the mortgagee's responsibility to mitigate its losses. In effect, it is afforded three months to reinvest its capital.

[27] The rationale behind s. 17 ceases to make sense when a mortgage goes into default after maturity. In that circumstance, the lender has already received (or is entitled to receive) the whole of the income stream contracted for. The three months bonus interest would, in such circumstances, be nothing more than a penalty, something it was not intended to be: see Mastercraft Properties at para. 4.

[39] I agree with the distinction made by Boswell J. in Lee between a mortgagee's charge for three months' interest under a prepayment clause in a mortgage where the default occurs and the payment of principal is to be made before maturity and such a charge where the default occurs at maturity, and the payment of principal is to be made at or after maturity. Where default in repayment of principal and accrued interest occurs at maturity, the mortgagee does not lose the contractually negotiated benefit of the stream of interest payments for the balance of the term of the mortgage. In this circumstance, the reasoning in Mastercraft would not apply. The bonus payment would not be "for the privilege of paying arrears without the necessity of giving the three months' notice contracted for". In this circumstance, there would be no prepayment and the three months' bonus interest would be a penalty.

[40] The Applicants cite the decision of Lauwers J. (as he then was) in Piesok v. Johnson, 2010 ONSC 1284. In Piesok the provision in question was like the relevant provision in BMMB in that it did not require the borrower to give three months' notice of payment of principal or pay three months' interest. In Piesok, Lauwers J. held that the provision in question did not contravene s. 8 of the Interest Act. Lauwers J. relied on the decision of the Divisional Court in O'Shanter Development Co. v. Gentra Canada Investments Inc., (1995) 25 O.R. (3d) 188 (Div. Ct.) where, in respect of a similar provision, the Divisional Court held that the mortgagor was required to pay the three months' interest as a condition of redemption. It appears that in Piesok, the three month interest charge was made after default but before maturity of the mortgage: Piesok, at para. 21. In this circumstance, the reasoning of the Court of Appeal in Mastercraft would apply. This fact distinguishes Piesok from the decisions of Boswell J. in Vinczer and Lee.

[41] I adopt the reasoning of Boswell J. in Vinczer and Lee and conclude that the charge of $125,000.01 for three months' interest under paragraph 14 of the Additional Provisions of the Mortgage is unenforceable because it contravenes s. 8(1) of the Interest Act.

Are the Applicants entitled to a distribution that includes the protective disbursements?

[42] The Responding Parties object to distribution of an amount that includes $358,897.67 (inclusive of compound interest) of protective disbursements primarily relating to legal fees incurred in connection with the receivership proceedings, as well as an interpleader action, solicitor's negligence action, and a lien action, as well as some other expenses.

[43] Mr. Gruneir gave evidence that as a result of the action by Mr. Farrell and Midas (the "Midas Action") in which they claimed for, among other things, declaration that the Mortgage is null, void and unenforceable, the law firm who represented the Applicants in connection with the Mortgage transaction, the title insurer of the Mortgage, Rescom, and Mr. Gruneir were sued by two investors in the Mortgage, Thomas Bock and Rosewill Investment Corporation (the "Bock Action"). Rescom and Mr. Gruneir retained the law firm Levine Sherkin Boussidan to represent them in the Bock Action. Rescom incurred legal expenses in connection with the Bock Action in the amount of $3,168.52. The Applicants claim reimbursement of this amount together with compound interest at the rate provided in the Mortgage in a total amount of $4,857.23.

[44] Mr. Gruneir also gave evidence of other protective disbursements that were incurred but not yet paid.

[45] Mr. Gruneir has given evidence that after default under the Mortgage on October 1, 2013, the Applicants delivered a notice and direction to the tenant of the Eastern Avenue property pursuant to the assignment of rents they obtain from Midas on the closing of the Mortgage. The tenant, 2281616 Ontario Inc. ("228") was subsequently contacted by Mr. Farrell on behalf of Midas, and instructed not to comply with the notice and direction because Mr. Farrell alleged that the Mortgage was fraudulently registered. As a result, 228 applied to interplead the rent payable under its lease into Court (the “Interpleader Application”).

[46] Mr. Gruneir has given evidence that as a result of the Midas Action and the allegations in the Bock Action against the lawyers who represented the Applicants, the Applicants commenced a solicitor’s negligence action against the lawyers (the “Solicitor’s Negligence Action”). The Solicitor’s Negligence Action was subsequently placed on hold upon the agreement of LAWPRO, pending the outcome of the Midas Action.

[47] The title insurer moved for summary judgment dismissing the Midas Action. On this motion, Mr. Gruneir swore three affidavits on behalf of the Applicants, in respect of which he was cross-examined by counsel for Midas. The lawyer who represented the Applicants (who was a defendant) also swore two affidavits on behalf of the Applicants, in respect of which she was cross-examined by counsel for Midas. The motion for summary judgment was dismissed by Brown J, (as he then was) and costs were ordered payable in the cause.

[48] The Applicants were sued together with Midas as defendants in a construction lien action by an architectural firm for priority over the Mortgage (the “Lien Action”). The Lien Action was eventually dismissed by order dated October 6, 2017, after it was discontinued against the Applicants.

[49] In connection with these matters, the Applicants claim expenses incurred in relation to the Mortgage with the law firm representing them and other expenses that have been incurred but not yet been paid. These expenses total $286,218. This amount is comprised of charges payable to Dickenson Wright LLP, the lawyers for the Applicants, of $238,461.68 and other expenses (evidenced by three invoices in the amounts of $1,576.35, $9,957, and $3,045.35).

[50] The Responding Parties submit that the protective disbursements should be disallowed because (a) certain of the protective disbursements do not fit within the terms of the indemnity granted by Midas under the Standard Charge Terms; and (b) the quantum of the protective disbursements is unreasonable.

[51] The Responding Parties submit that Midas is not under any contractual obligation (under the Commitment Letter or the Mortgage) to indemnify the Applicants for legal fees or disbursements in connection with the interpleader application, the solicitor’s negligence action or the lien action.

[52] The Standard Charge Terms provide in section 8 that “all costs, charges, legal fees (as between solicitor and client) and expenses which may be incurred ... generally in any other proceedings taken in connection with or to realize upon the security given in the Charge ... shall be, with interest at the rate provided for in the Charge, a charge upon the land in favour of the Chargee pursuant to the terms of the Charge ...”.

[53] The Applicants are entitled to add to the amount secured by the Mortgage all costs and expenses reasonably and properly incurred in ascertaining, asserting, or defending their rights or in recovering the mortgage debt: Nelson v. Nelson, 1903 CarswellOnt 649, at para. 1, cited in Marriott and Dunn: Practice in Mortgage Remedies in Ontario, 5th Edition, at §20.8.

[54] With respect to the Bock Action, I accept the evidence of Mr. Gruneir that this action was brought because of the position advanced by Midas that the Mortgage was null, void, and unenforceable. This assertion was without merit but, nevertheless, the Applicants were required to incur expenses to defend the Bock Action. The expenses to defend the Bock Action were incurred in proceedings taken in connection with the security given in the Mortgage. The expenses are reasonable.

[55] With respect to the Solicitor's Negligence Action, I accept Mr. Gruneir's evidence that this action was commenced as a result of the action by Midas and the allegations in the Bock Action against the Applicants' lawyers. I am satisfied that the expenses incurred in respect of the Solicitor's Negligence Action qualify as expenses incurred in connection with the security given in the Mortgage. These expenses would not have been incurred had Midas not challenged the enforceability of the Mortgage.

[56] With respect to the Midas action, the responding parties object to charges by Dickenson Wright in respect of this action where another law firm represented them in this action and where costs were ordered by Justice Koehnen. The responding parties submit that the charges by Dickenson Wright should be disallowed. I do not accept this submission. The Applicants are contractually entitled to charge legal fees incurred in proceedings taken in connection with the security given in the Mortgage. Midas chose to challenge the enforceability of the Mortgage and the charges for legal services provided by Dickenson Wright qualify as charges that are recoverable under the Mortgage.

[57] With respect to the charges by Dickenson Wright LLP, the responding parties point to a docket entry dated May 19, 2021 for a charge of $4,991.50 where the description of the service reads "97463". This is obviously a clerical error but, in the absence of a description of the services, I do not allow recovery of this amount.

[58] The responding parties also point to the time docket entries which show time spent on May 20, 2021 and on other days by the Applicants' lawyers to review and revise the receiver's reports. They submit that these time entries are evidence that there was double charging by the Applicants' lawyers for services provided by the receiver's lawyers. I do not accept this submission. I do not regard it to be unusual for an appointing creditor to provide comments and input on a receiver's draft report in circumstances where the appointing creditors may have more information. I do not regard the charges to represent duplication of work.

[59] I am satisfied by the evidence of Mr. Gruneir that the protective disbursements were incurred as a result of the challenges made by Midas to enforcement of the Mortgage. The Applicants have tendered evidence through Mr. Gruneir of the amount of the protective disbursements. The expenses were incurred in proceedings taken in connection with the security given in the Mortgage, and I am satisfied that the connection is sufficiently close that, with the exception of $4,991.50 (where the service is not described), the protective disbursements were reasonably and properly incurred and should not be disallowed.

Are the Applicants entitled to a distribution of amounts that include compound interest?

[60] The Applicants seek distribution of an amount that includes payment of compound interest.

[61] The Responding Parties oppose distribution of an amount that includes compound interest. They submit that only simple interest is payable under the Mortgage.

[62] The Responding Parties rely on the Commitment which, with respect to interest, reads:

We are pleased to issue our commitment to arrange blanket mortgage financing on the above referenced properties on the following terms and conditions.

Interest Rate: 10.0 percent per annum calculated and payable interest only monthly, not in advance.

[63] The Mortgage, in Schedule "A" - Additional Provisions to the Mortgage includes, in paragraph 1, the following statement:

1. Letter of Commitment

Any reference in this Charge to the Commitment Letter or Letter Commitment (the "Commitment Letter" or "Letter of Commitment") shall mean the Commitment Letter referable to this transaction dated December 17th, 2012 (and any amendments thereto, if applicable).

This Charge shall secure any and all amounts owing by the Chargor to the Chargee pursuant to the Letter of Commitment.

All provisions of the Letter of Commitment are hereby incorporated into this Charge.

Any default by the Mortgage or with regard to any provision of the Letter of Commitment shall constitute a default under this Charge.

[64] The Mortgage, in paragraph 2 of Schedule "A", expressly provides for compound interest:

2. Interest Rate

The mortgage shall bear interest at the rate of 10.0% per annum, compounded and payable monthly, not in advance. Interest at the aforesaid rate on the amount advanced from time to time shall be payable Interest only on the first day of each and every month. The parties hereto acknowledge and agree that the Chargee shall not be deemed to reinvest any monthly or other payments received by it hereunder.

In case default shall be made in payment of any sum to become due for interest at any time appointed for payment in this Charge, compound interest shall be payable and the sum in arrears for interest from time to time, as well after as before maturity and judgment, shall bear interest at the rate provided for in this Charge. In case the interest and compound interest are not paid in one month from the time of default, a rest shall be made, and compound interest at the rate provided for in this Charge shall be payable on the aggregate amount then due, as well after as before maturity and judgment, and so on from time to time, and all such interest and compound interest shall be a charge upon the Charged Property.

[65] The Responding Parties submit that the Commitment provides only for simple interest calculated at 10% per annum and payable monthly. They submit that a plain reading of the Mortgage together with the Commitment demonstrates the intention that the terms of the Commitment shall govern in the case of any ambiguity or conflict. The Responding Parties submit that if I were to find there to be an ambiguity in the agreement between the parties, the doctrine of contra proferentum applies and I should construe the ambiguity against the drafting parties, the Applicants.

[66] In support of these submissions, the Responding Parties rely on P.A.R.C.E.L..

[67] In P.A.R.C.E.L., the Court of Appeal for Ontario decided an appeal from a summary judgment on a promissory note and mortgage. Both the note and the mortgage stipulated the same repayment terms while there was no default. Under the note, the interest rate, before default, was 0.75% per annum. The mortgage provided for the same monthly payments and the same interest rate. The note provided for escalation of the applicable interest rate from 0.75% to 10% per annum “after demand, default and pre- and post judgment”. The mortgage contained no interest escalation provision. The mortgage provided for a late payment charge of $10 per day and a missed payment fee of $300 for each missed or late installment. The mortgagee obtained summary judgment for the outstanding principal plus interest at the rate of 10 per cent plus late payment charges and default fees. The defendants appealed. The main issue was whether the claims for interest at the higher rate upon default and for late payment charges and missed payment fees offend s. 8 of the Interest Act.

[68] The Court of Appeal, at para. 68, held that repayment of the loan was secured by a promise to pay set out in the promissory note and that note was secured, in turn, by a mortgage on real property in the same amount. The Court of Appeal, at para. 71, held that in these circumstances, the terms of the note determined the post-default rate of interest payable on the one debt between the parties. The Court of Appeal, at paras. 72-73, rejected the submission that the enforceable post-default interest rates applicable under the note and the mortgage may differ in respect of the same loan. The Court of Appeal held that, given that the note was secured by a mortgage on real property, both instruments fall within the ambit of section 8 of the Interest Act. The Court of Appeal held, at para. 76, that the interest escalation provision in the note conflicts with s. 8 of the Interest Act and cannot be given effect. The Court of Appeal also set aside the awards for late payment charges and default fees as offending s. 8 of the Interest Act.

[69] The Responding Parties submit that here, like in P.A.R.C.E.L., there are two conflicting provisions for payment of interest and the court must determine which obligation must be met. They submit that the Commitment, like the note in P.A.R.C.E.L., is the primary contractual source of the debt obligation and that the interest provision in the Commitment, that does not provide for compound interest, prevails over the conflicting provision in the Mortgage that provides for compound interest.

[70] The Applicants rely on the decision of Krever J., as he then was, in Re A.J.F. Investments Ltd. and Vellco Investments Ltd., 1985 CanLII 2255 (O.N.S.C.). In Vellco a mortgage provided for payment of interest on the mortgage loan and that principal and interest shall become due and payable at the end of the term of the loan. The mortgage provided that interest was chargeable at a specified rate per annum “calculated half-yearly not in advance”. The question before the court was whether, on a fair reading of the language used by the parties to express their agreement, the mortgagor undertook to pay compound interest in the period during which no amount was payable. Krever J. considered the language used by the parties and held: “[t]o calculate the interest half-yearly not in advance and, then, to ignore the calculation is to put the parties, or at least the mortgagee, to a useless exercise. In the circumstances of this case, I conclude that the word ‘calculated’ in the provision of the mortgage I have quoted has the same meaning as ‘compounded’”. The Applicants submit that the same reasoning applies to the language used in the Commitment and the Mortgage and, insofar as the Commitment provides for interest of 10.0% per annum, calculated and payable interest only monthly, not in advance, compound interest is payable under the Mortgage.

[71] The facts in Vellco differ from those on the motion before me because in Vellco no interest was payable monthly whereas, under the Mortgage, interest was payable monthly, so the calculation of monthly interest cannot be said to have been a “useless exercise”. I agree, however, with the approach taken in Vellco in which the court considered the language used by the parties in the mortgage to give effect to their intention with respect to payment of interest under the mortgage.

[72] I do not agree that the language in the Commitment with respect to interest conflicts with the provisions of the Mortgage. The Commitment, although stating that interest is to be paid at the rate of 10.0 per cent per annum calculated and payable monthly, does not expressly address whether, on default in payment of monthly interest under the Mortgage, interest is to be paid on interest in arrears. The Mortgage expressly addresses this circumstance and provides for payment of compound interest. At the time of the loan transaction, an Acknowledgement and Direction attaching the draft Mortgage was signed by Mr. Kavanagh on behalf of Midas and the Mortgage has the same terms. Section 6 of the Standard Charge Terms also provides for compound interest and Mr. Kavanagh signed an Acknowledgement that Midas received the set of Standard Charge Terms included in the Mortgage before signing the Acknowledgement and Direction.

[73] I interpret the provisions in the Commitment and in the Mortgage with respect to interest by reading the two documents as being part of a single mortgage loan transaction. I consider the Commitment and the Mortgage in the context of the surrounding circumstances where Mr. Kavanagh, on behalf of Midas, acknowledged receipt of the draft mortgage expressly providing for compound interest and of standard charge terms that also so provide, without objection. The provision for compound interest upon default was not expressly addressed in the Commitment but was required by the Applicants as a condition of the Mortgage. Midas accepted this term. When it did so, the parties agreed, as part of a single mortgage loan transaction, that compound interest is payable under the Mortgage at the rate specified therein.

[74] The Responding Parties also submit that the provision in the Mortgage for compound interest after default violates s. 8(1) of the Interest Act and, therefore, is not enforceable.

[75] Section 8(2) of the Interest Act provides:

- (2) Nothing in this section has the effect of prohibiting a contract for the payment of interest on arrears of interest or principal at any rate not greater than the rate payable on principal money not in arrears.

[76] Section 8(2) is clear that a provision in a mortgage for payment of compound interest after default does not offend the Interest Act. The rate of interest on which interest is payable on interest in arrears,

10.0 per cent per annum, is not greater than the rate payable on principal money not in arrears. Section 8(2) of the Interest Act applies.

[77] The Mortgage, insofar as it provides for payment of compound interest, is valid and enforceable and does not offend the Interest Act.

Disposition

[78] For these reasons:

- a. The Mortgage extension fees of $278,413.70 are not approved and are disallowed;

Subject: The Midas Investment Corporation ("Midas") - Neirinck & Associates Claim for payment of fees

As you have been informed by Mr. Sherkin and on a without prejudice basis, I am prepared to accept a payment of $400,000 plus $52,000 on account of HST thereon for a total of $452,000 from the Receiver from the remaining proceeds of sale in satisfaction of the claim for payment I have submitted to yourself as Receiver for Midas. This is on the basis that I am maintaining my right to payment of all of the fees owed to me by Midas but willing to accept less from the Receiver for Midas in the prevailing financial circumstances including the balance held by the Receiver and the other claims being made.

However, my willingness to accept a payment of $452,000 is subject to several conditions. First, that I will definitely be paid the entire $452,000 in return for my willingness to accept payment of $452,000 on account of my claim to the Receiver; in other words, I would not be prepared to agree to a payment of only $452,000 without confirmation that I will then be paid the entire $452,000. Second, although it is a formality, I also need confirmation that none of the monies received by Mr. Farrell from the former tenant for Eastern on account of an Amended Agreement of Purchase and Sale negotiated by Mr. Farrell with that tenant have been remitted by Mr. Farrell to the Receiver; obviously, this is to preserve a claim against Mr. Farrell for payment of the balance of my owed fees from those monies. Third, that I receive an appropriate Release from Mr. Kavanagh in a form which has to be agreed upon between myself and Mr. Sherkin but with respect to which I do not foresee a problem.

Please consider and then let me know whether or not we can resolve my claim for fees on those terms. If yes, there will be some needed brief paperwork and I will then contact Mr. Sherkin with respect to the needed Release from Mr. Kavanagh. Thank you.

Dear Mr. Farrell

Re: The Midas Investment Corporation (“Midas”)

We are writing in response to your letter dated December 22, 2022 which was attached to your dispute of the Receiver’s disallowance of the claim that you submitted within the claims process. We advise as follows:

You filed a claim in the amount of $1,922,662.54. In support of your claim you submitted information documenting transactions between you and Midas as well as information of transactions between you and third party financial institutions. We reviewed your claim and the information attached and ultimately disallowed your claims for two reasons. Firstly your claim included an amount of $1,895,231.23 which are amounts owing by you to several financial instructions and are not obligations of Midas and therefore should not have been included in your claim Secondly, given that the Midas financial statements indicate that the shareholders are indebted to Midas in an amount in excess of $2 million, it doesn’t appear that Midas is in fact indebted to the shareholders, as you have claimed. You have provide no additional information to support a changes to the Receiver’s disallowance.

In respect to your comments regarding Mr. Kavanagh, if you have additional information regarding funds that he withdrew from Midas, please provide immediately. As we have advised on several occasions, we did not have complete books for Midas and any additional information you can provide may be of assistance.

The judgement against Mr. Kavanagh that you reference is in favour of the mortgagees relating to Mr. Kavanagh’s guarantee of the mortgage. Given that the mortgage was fully repaid from the assets of Midas, the mortgagees did not have to rely on Mr. Kavanagh’s guarantee to satisfy the amount owing.

We anticipate that there will be surplus funds available after payment of third party claims which would likely be available to the shareholders.

ROSEN GOLDBERG
